THE CALCIUM'S GLARE

The annual epidemic student dramatic productions is now fairly under way. It is true that the performances run severe financial risk in competing with the hop and formal season, but unlike athletics these forms of activity can not be limited to set times of the year so as not to interfere with one another. The Dramatic club, in the "Servants in the House," set a standard which has not been reached before. The German dramatic club follows with its contribution toward the higher type of amateur acting. The yearly junior class play is under way, and bids fair to exceed the play of last year—not considering any of the hardships under which a class play is produced. Plans for the senior play are not yet formulated, but the senior play has always been a profit and a pride to the class. The Kosmet club has announced the production of its third musical comedy. The Styx vaudeville production is scheduled for tonight.

In all of these productions, students take their parts without further consideration than the pleasure they receive and the recognition of having had a part. No credit is given, and no remuneration is received. Class work suffers as a consequence of the long hours which must be spent in preparation. The part of a "lead" is an acknowledged social feather in one's cap. The other parts are usually gifts toward the success of the production. Yet they are given freely, and it is considered time well spent after the play has been given and one gets down to the grind again. All of which suffices to show that the glare of calcium has its allurements for the student, as well as for the professionals. The University audience is critical but friendly, and it is never necessary to close the performance with a "Nunc plaudite."

Preparations Made for Y. W. Circus.

The Y. W. C. A. is preparing for an entertainment to be given in the armory, January 23, which gives promise of being exceptionally good. The entertainment called the "Circus" will have all the attractions of the usual three-ring circus, side shows and freaks included.

"RAG STAFF IN ACTION" IS TITLE OF NEW PHOTO PLAY

Deserting their lunches or dashing from the table, each member of the Rag staff took himself, or herself to the sacred confines of the office of the said publication, yesterday afternoon in feverish haste. The cause of all this hurry was the fact that Friday was Cornhusker picture day at the Nebraskan office. The hour of twelve-thirty was the chosen one in which to torture the photographer and the 'gang' assembled at that hour to have their pictures preserved for posterity.

Something had to be a little off, so the photographer kindly consented to be the object of wrath when he delayed the performance by appearing some minutes late. When he arrived he found his subjects in front of Uni hall performing for Dr. Condra and his movie machine. The obliging doctor had chanced that way while the angry staff was bewailing the tardiness of their picture man.

Having been assured that the state could not possibly do without the Nebraskan, and that he was more than justified in waisting several feet of film on the bunch, he quickly consented to shoot them in action. So they were found by the still-life photographer.

After this rare bit of excitement they proceeded into the office, there to select the proper spot and pose for the picture of glory. This business of arrangement nearly proved the undoing of the patient producer of flashlights. Finally the great event was over and amid dense clouds of flashlight smoke the staff dispersed to finish the interrupted meal.

GYM CLASSES CAUSING WORRY

Co-Eds Suddenly Industrious as End of Semester Approaches—Tango Forsaken for Gym.

Don't be startled when you see some girl rush madly toward the armory, as though she was going to a fire or an eight o'clock dish-pan sale. It is really nothing of great importance, but only one of the seasonable signs which show that the end of the semester is near. Despite the balmy weather and the call of friends to loiter, many co-eds are appearing at gym classes, innumerable times this week in a desperate struggle to make up the list of cuts that have accumulated throughout the semester.

Position, right about face, and forward, march, are the pass words of the hour while the intricate steps of the folk dances have for the time replaced the over-taxed tango.

University Notices

The German Dramatic club will give a banquet tonight at the Lindell hotel in honor of the caste of "Flachsmans als Erzelder."

All orders for senior caps must be in this week. Orders at the University book store.

Officers' Club Behind Movement to Reinstate Annual Military Camp

The Officers' club is behind a movement for the circulation of a petition among the members of the cadet regiment, in favor of a camp which is to be held this coming spring. In an unofficial way a vote was taken among the members of the Officers' club and it was found that the club was unanimously in favor of the petition. The final decision in this matter will be given by the university senate to whom this petition will be addressed. No plans for this camp have been given out, but these will be announced later when the facts are more definitely known. The men connected with the making of the plans have intimated that if the movement is carried through, the camp will be some what better than those of the past.
