AT ORPHEUM—Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

tion in Memorial Hall, next Thursday.
The B flat Symphony, Schumann's first published work of this kind, was introduced at the Gewandhaus concert in Leipzig on March 31, 1841, Mendelssohn conducting, and was an instantaneous success.

In life, freshness and the inward feeling of happiness the B flat symphony is said by critics to stand at the head of them all.

Schumann originally intended to call it the "Spring Symphony," and wrote it when the first breath of spring was in the air. The first movement was to have been called "Spring's Awakening" and the final "Spring's Farewell," but he omitted the explanatory titles because he thought they distracted attention.

Schumann was at all times enthusiastically romantic, but just at this period of his life he was in an especially joyous frame of mind, and probably much of the springlike feeling in this symphony came from his delight at being at last united to his hardly won bride, Clara Wieck. So intense was his zeal that it is said he wrote the entire composition in four days.

"The beginning evidently represents a trumpet summons sent pealing down from on high; then gentle zephyrs blow softly to and fro, and everywhere the dormant forces awake and make their way to the light. In the Allegro the Spring comes laughing in, in the full beauty of youth. An enchanting effect is produced by the spring song at the close of the first movement, played as though sung with a full heart."

Schumann is said to have written this symphony with a steel pen which he found on Schubert's grave in Vienna.

TWO ARDENT Y. W. C. A. WORKERS ARRIVE TODAY

Miss Taft and Miss Blanchard—Will Speak at Vesper Service Tomorrow.

Miss Taft and Miss Blanchard will arrive Wednesday at 10 o'clock. Miss Taft will speak at the Thursday evening vesper service on the subject, "The Chinese College Girl." Miss Taft's wide experience with the Chinese will give her talk a note of unusual interest and value. All University women are invited to be present for this especially arranged vesper service.

University girls have a rare treat in this opportunity to meet two such interesting women who have the welfare of Y. W. C. A. work so close to their hearts. Both have labored in large fields and under trying circumstances in the great cause and both bring from their varied experiences inspiration and encouragement for those interested in association work.

Miss Taft's work has been among Chinese girls in the government schools, and corresponds to Y. W. C. A. work in American colleges. Her talks will make the scope and purpose of the Y. W. C. A. a more vital truth for it will bring a sense of kinship between the Chinese girls and those of other countries.

Miss Blanchard will visit the University of Nebraska in future and it is important that she meet the University girls in a social way in order that she may be of service to the association.
