"HISTORICAL."
 As far as we are able to discover, the first written report concerning the organizing of a School of Pharmacy in the University of Nebraska was made by a committee appointed by former Chancellor E. Benjamin Andrews in the spring of 1907. The committee consisted of Dr. Samuel Avery (now Chancellor), Dr. Charles E. Bessey, senior dean of the University and head of the Department of Botany, and Dr. H. B. Ward, dean of the College of Medicine. The report of the committee considered the subjects of organization, requirements for admission, course of study, the expense to the University, and room space for the school. The report was full of valuable suggestions. No specific recommendations were made. It ended with the following conclusion:
 "The College of Medicine and the Departments of Botany and Chemistry will, if the University authorities decide to establish a School of Pharmacy, co-operate to make a success in all respects."

In the fall of the year new interest was aroused in the prospective School of Pharmacy and the name of Dr. Lyman of the Department of Pharmacology was added to the above named committee. Plans were laid for an organization and were presented by Chancellor Andrews to the Board of Regents and approved by them on April 23, 1908. Dr. R. A. Lyman was made director, Mr. F. J. Perusse of the University of Kansas became an instructor in pharmacy, and Mr. N. P. Hansen, a prominent retail druggist of the state, became lecturer in commercial pharmacy. At a later date Miss Elsie Day was elected instructor in pharmacognosy and Mr. H. L. Thompson assistant in pharmacy.

The first year the total registration amounted to twelve students. The registration has steadily increased year by year. Last year the number was forty-seven, and this year there are thirty-seven.

The first class, three in number, was graduated in 1910.

From the beginning, two, three and four year courses have been given. It is an interesting fact that twenty-five per cent of the students at the present time are registered in the four-year course leading to the bachelor's degree.

Up to the last year a sixteen point high school course has been required for entrance to the short course in pharmacy, but now a thirty-point high school course is required of all matriculates for the degrees in the School of Pharmacy.

It gives the faculty and student body alike much satisfaction to know that in the first five years of the existence of the School of Pharmacy its work has been of such a nature as to place it upon the "registered" lists of such examining boards as those of the states of Iowa, Illinois and New York.

JOKES.

Shake when taking.

"Well, my friend, I hope that you are following my prescription: pills three times a day and a drop of whisky at bedtime?"

"Yes, doctor. I may be a little behind with the pills, but I'm about six weeks ahead with the whisky."

An old woman stepped into a suburban drug store and laid on the counter a prescription calling for a mixture containing two decigrams of morphia.

The druggist exercised the utmost care in weighing out the dangerous drug.

"What a shame," she cried. "Don't be so stingy. It's for an orphan girl."

"Let me tell you, sir, that poem cost me a week's hard labor."

Prof.: "Is that all? If I had the passing of that sentence you'd have got a month at least."

A SUBSTITUTE.

A druggist died and went up to the golden gate, knocked and asked for admission.

St. Peter asked him what he wanted.

"I want to go to Heaven," the druggist said.

St. Peter replied: "We can't let you into Heaven, but we have a place 'just as good' that we can recommend."
