NEBRASKA WOMEN AID SUFFRAGE CAUSE

Many College Women Working For Equal Rights—Dr. Thomas of Bryn Mawr One of Best.

A representative of the Nebraskan called on Dr. Eaves to get some points about what college women are doing in the suffrage movement. She assured him that nearly all the women teachers in colleges and universities are ardent advocates of equal suffrage.

"This is particularly true of those trained in the social sciences. It is inevitable that they come to a keen realization of the interest of women in the social legislation that is now the chief concern of the law-making bodies of all great civilized nations. Dr. Thomas, the president of Bryn Mawr, is one of the ablest writers and speakers in the suffrage cause. Prof. Ann Martin, of Nevada State University, a former pupil of Dr. Howard's, heads the suffrage movement of her state. The California College Equal Suffrage League did excellent work during the campaign there its president being also at the head of the general state organization. Not content merely with helping win the contest in California, this league is now giving financial assistance to the campaign states.

Quite a substantial sum was collected last summer, from which seventy-five dollars were contributed to the Nebraska campaign funds.

"By-the-way do you know that one of our recent Nebraska graduates is doing fine work for the suffrage cause in conservative Boston?" said Miss Eaves. "Miss Jean Sullivan, who took her masters' degree here two years ago is now an organizer and speaker for the Boston Suffrage Association. On Saturday evening when I addressed an Omaha street meeting a number of our alumnae were on hand diligently passing out literature to the crowd, or doing their best to encourage the speaker. Oh, yes, the college women are with us! The rare exception proves the rule. How could it be otherwise with self-respecting women who have any brains?"

Novel Plan For Reed Tug-o'-War.
The annual tug of war between the Sophomores and Freshmen of Reed College has a unique feature. The tug is carried on with the contestants on both sides of a shallow body of water, so that the losing team is ignominiously dragged through the pool. The icy bath, which is sure to come to one or the other of the teams, always draws a large body of spectators.—Columbia Spectator.
