Wednesday and the match yesterday put the winner into the finals. Ellis was at his best and won in straight sets, the scores being 6-4, 6-1, and 6-4. Gardiner took the first three games but after that everything turned in favor of Ellis. It was expected by the tennis followers that the match would at least go five sets and the result was quite a surprise even to the supporters of the winner. This afternoon Ellis will play Chatt in the finals for the championship of the University. The match will be played on the University courts and no doubt will be closely contested.

A modern "town and gown" row was precipitated last week at the University of Wisconsin, when students of the university tried to throw a town boy into Lake Mendota, mistaking him for a fellow student. In the resulting street fight 300 students battled with several hundred citizens, despite the cooling powers of the streams from several hydrants, which the city fire department directed into the crowd of combatants.
 C. R. Van Hise, president of the university, stood bond for the four students arrested and addressed the 1,500 students who surrounded the university, thirsting for battle and persuaded the mob to disperse.
