Harvard 7—Michigan 0; thus stands the score in the biggest inter-sectional scrap of the year. We had hoped that Yost's Wolverines would be returned the victors, but it now appears that old Mrs. Destiny must have ignored our wishes, when she picked the winner. We can console ourselves with the fact that Michigan outplayed Harvard, during the greater part of the struggle.

From the Eastern viewpoint: Yale 28; Notre Dame 0. Notre Dame 33; South Dakota 0. South Dakota 0; Nebraska 0.

The way we like to look at it: Harvard 7; Michigan 0. Michigan 3; Michigan Aggies 0. Michigan Aggies 0; Nebraska 24.

The two little tallenders of the Missouri Valley Conference, Drake and Washington University, of St. Louis, fought a 7 to 7 draw, Saturday. Neither team can claim the conference championship on the strength of that score.

Hopes for the "Big Nine" championship, and along with it, a claim to the Western championship, rose in the breasts of the Gopher rooters, when they held the overbearing Maroons to a 0 to 0 tie, in Saturday's game, at Madison. The serious injury of "Dolly" Gray, star half for Chicago, at a most critical time, helped the Gophers considerably.

Still another tie was the result of the Kansas-Oklahoma game, the score being 16 to 16. Just why each team chose the unusual number 16, as a place to stop scoring, it is impossible for us to say. Perhaps the blowing of the final whistle had something to do with it.

The Missouri Tigers defeated the Kansas Aggies 13 to 3, Saturday. Missouri now pretends to hope (notwithstanding her defeat at the hands of Ames), for a victory over Kansas, which, she fondly points out, will put her on a par with any team in the conference—if Kansas beats Nebraska. How's that for an optimistic outlook?

The Y. W. C. A. of the teachers' college high school entertained the pupils and teachers at a Hallowe'en party on Friday evening. There were many witches, ghosts, hob-goblins and sprites. Amusements were provided in the various class rooms during the earlier part of the evening. Later all the guests were assembled in the study hall where refreshments were served. A program of readings and ghost stories followed. About 150 were present.

The Pi Beta Phi sorority gave a Hallowe'en dancing party last night at the Rosewilde hall. The programs and decorations were in festival suggestions. Fifty couples attended.
