ENROLLMENT LARGE

EVERY COLLEGE SHOWS SLIGHT INCREASE

THE 1914 TOTAL REACHES 3,807

Total Number Last Year Was 3,752, Showing an Increase of Fifty-Five—Largest Number in Arts and Science College.

According to a statement from the Registrar's office, the following registration statistics are comparative for November 1st of 1913 and 1914. "This is not the total registration for the year and should not be compared with the statistics given in the general catalogues," says Registrar Greer. "The registration for the second semester and the registration in the winter short course of the College of Agriculture will change this number very materially. The grand totals indicated show an increase for this year on November 1st of fifty-five, whereas, considering the foot-note attached to these statistics, the increase is 245."

*The number given in 1913 included the estimated number of registrations in the winter short-course of Agriculture. Registrations in this course are not included in any of the figures for 1914. Deducting the number so included in 1913 from the total for that year leaves it 3,562 unreported registrations.

Miss Tamzon Manker, who attended the University last year and was a member of the Dramatic Club, is playing the leading role in a stock company presentation of "Tess of the Storm Country," at Council Bluffs. The Omaha World-Herald said: "Her work as Tess, the wild child of the squatter settlement, was cleverly done and gave promise of still greater successes for this pleasing young woman."

MR. AND MRS. BLISS AT SATURDAY'S GAME

Professor Bliss Now Located at Ames, Iowa—Visits Former Friends at Nebraska.

Professor and Mrs. R. K. Bliss visited Lincoln to see the Nebraska-Ames football game and renew their acquaintance with their friends at the University. Professor Bliss is now the Director of the Extension Service at the Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa, where more than forty men are employed in extension work, short courses, and County Agent's work.

FRESHMAN GIRLS TO HAVE BIG PARTY

Will Have a "Get Acquainted" Party—to be Held November 21st—Committees Named.

Last evening, in Miss Graham's rooms, the Freshmen girls held a meeting and decided to have a Freshmen girls "get acquainted" party. Miss Edith Yungblut was elected chairman of all the committees and the chairmen of the other committees were chosen. The following young ladies are the heads of the different committees: Louise Dobbs, invitation; Lucille Lees, refreshment; Helen Humpe, entertainment; Evelyn Caldwell, finance; Marion Reeder, press, and Eca Miller, decoration.

The party will be held in the Armory on November 21st and will in all probabilities begin at 3 o'clock. The Freshmen girls are not going to be left behind by the girls of any of the other classes and a good time is promised for all the girls at this party. Every loyal Freshman girl must lend her assistance in every way possible to make this "the party" of the year in the social circle. The girls will meet each other in the classes and in this way start friendships that will last forever. Much of the enjoyment of one's college life depends on the friendships she makes during her course, so it's "up to you" girls to do your share in this one of the most important events of your initial year at this school.

SECOND SYMPHONY CONVOCATION THURSDAY

Composed When Beethoven Was Only Thirty-Two Years of Age—Little Trace of Sorrowful Mood.

Beethoven's Second Symphony will be given at convocation next Thursday at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall. It is planned to give the entire series of Beethoven's symphonies, the first having been presented three weeks ago. These renditions of famous musical works by strings and organ under the direction of Mrs. Carrie B. Raymond are prominent features in the cultural activities of the university, and the hall on these occasions is always thronged, not only by the student body but also by Lincoln music lovers generally.

The second symphony was composed about 1802, and is, like the first, in the accepted classical style, following the form, if not the ideas of his predecessors, Haydn and Mozart. It is interesting to note that although Beethoven's deafness was already increasing, and in consequence he was often greatly depressed in mind, as is known from external sources, nevertheless this symphony shows no indication of deep seated melancholy. On the contrary it is one of the most brilliant and triumphant musical pieces that had hitherto ever been written. Even the lovely Larghetto, one of the best known and most admired of Beethoven's compositions, has in its flowing melody but little trace of the inner sorrow that darkened his later life. He was still young—thirty-two—and he had still the courage and buoyancy of young manhood.

The performers next Thursday will be Mr. E. J. Walt, first violin; Mrs. August Molzer, second violin; Mr. William T. Quick, viola; Miss Lillian Eiche, violoncello, with Mrs. Raymond at the organ.

BRYAN GIVES TALK

SPEAKS FORTY-FIVE MINUTES AT CONVOCATION.

LARGEST NUMBER IN HALL

Introduced by Chancellor Avery—Address Covered the Relation of Man to Government, to Society and to His God.

"Throughout the world Lincoln is known as the residence of William Jennings Bryan. Lincoln bears the additional distinction of being the location of the University of Nebraska. Hence it is peculiarly fitting that this morning I should be able to present Secretary Bryan to the University of Nebraska. Secretary Bryan." With these few, well chosen remarks Chancellor Avery gracefully yielded the platform to the secretary of state of the United States and took his seat amid deafening applause.

For forty-five minutes Secretary Bryan addressed probably the largest audience that has ever crowded Memorial Hall. Yet whenever he paused for a moment the ticking of the clock could be heard throughout the room, so intensely did the students await his next words.

The subject of his address was of especial interest to students, dealing, as it did, with the relation of man to the government, the relation of man to society and the relation of man to God. Whether speaking for church or state Lincoln's distinguished statesman has never failed to leave the impression that resulted in the apt appellation, "silver tongued."

Illustrating the first topic of his speech with the Bible story of Lazarus, he said that while the aristocrat would be telling how lucky it was for Lazarus that Dives was these the democrat would be devising a way to provide table and food for all, so none would have to take the fallen crumbs.

The relation between man and society, or service and reward, he considered next. He said in part: "A man can rightfully collect from society only as much as he earns. Those who have earned five million dollars were too busy to collect it. Those who have collected it were too busy to earn it."

In his consideration of the last topic he said that religion could be monopolized by no church. He spoke on this subject with fully as much grace, dignity and familiarity as any ordained pastor, and presented his statements in a way that will be remembered.

The immense crowd was composed not only of students. Gray haired men and small grade children were as eager to hear and see as the university men and women.

On the platform with Chancellor Avery and the others, appeared A. R. Talbot, former law partner of Secretary Bryan's and now at the head of the Modern Woodmen.

NEBRASKA TO HAVE ANOTHER GOOD BAND

Professor Cornell Organizing Students at Farm—Movement Meets With Very Ready Response.

Prof. Cornell is making an effort to organize a second band to be made up of musicians at the farm and others of the University who are not members of the regular band. The movement so far has met with ready response by musicians of both camps.

ELECTION REPORTS INTEREST STUDENTS

Students Take a Live Interest in Political Issue—Many Watch Returns Last Night.

At time of going to press last night no definite returns from the election were available but it was interesting to note the interest which the student body took in the different questions. The Laws left school in a body yesterday morning to work at the different polling places, but they were not the only ones from the 4,000 students at Nebraska who were prominent around the polls. Many of the state and local candidates have relatives in the University and of course everyone of them has a lot of friends in school working for him.

Even the co-eds are wearing tags—mostly yellow posters—and are doing their share of the electioneering. If all the ladies in the state are as enthusiastic over suffrage as the University girls the amendment will carry by 50,000 majority.

There are bound to be some close races this year but all may rest assured that no matter who wins the jobs some will be pleased. Here's to the winners.

Hortense Kaufman, '14, who is teaching in Geneva, Nebraska, came up last night to spend a short time with her sisters and friends while on her way to the Teachers' Association at Omaha.

HALF NUMBER OF SWIMMERS RESPOND

Seventy-seven Registered But Only Twenty-Four Bought Tickets—Will Open When Fifty Sign.

In response to a notice tacked up in the gym several days ago, seventy-seven girls have registered for a swimming class to be conducted by Miss Parks and Miss Beghtol at the Y. M. C. A. pool on Wednesdays from 9:00 to 11:30 a. m. Twenty-four girls have already bought tickets. The class will be started as soon as fifty tickets are sold. Miss Parks is highly pleased with the ready response to her efforts along this line.

Co-ed Athletes at Texas Complain.

Intercollegiate contests and games open to the public are the ends to a campaign which is now being staged by the co-ed athletes of the University. The girls complain that, under present conditions, it is impossible to arouse any interest. Basketball is practically the only game open to the girls; only class games are played; and they are played under cover of the gym.

The present campaign has been renewed every autumn for the last few years. Great impetus was given it two years ago when the Southwestern University co-ed basketball team was allowed to come to Austin. Not knowing the restrictions under which the Texas girls played, the S. U. girls brought their coach, who was a man. He was excluded from the game and spent the time in the parlor of the woman's building. The visitors had to play the game by means of a line of communication between a window of the parlor and a window of the gym below. The absurdity of the situation provoked a campaign, which the girls declare they will bring to an end during the present session.—Daily Texan.

HUSKERS IN DANGER

CAN MORNINGSIDE CRUSH CORNHUSKERS?

FOOD FOR MUCH THOUGHT

Team Is Doing Only Light Signal Practice These Days—Stiehm Will Scout the Kansas-Washburn Game Himself.

By H. I. Kyle

"Can the Morningsiders crush the Cornhuskers?" This, according to the Sioux City Tribune, is the big question that is obsessing the minds of Sioux City fans this week. Beside it, the election and the war sink into insignificance. It is being debated on every corner, and on all occasions, by the ambitious sports of the Sunrise School. They argue it this way: Ames held the Cornhuskers for forty-five minutes, Saturday. This is undoubtedly an indication that Nebraska is deteriorating rapidly, for did she not defeat the Michigan Aggies only the week before? Now, then, since the Huskers have hit the toboggan, is it not reasonable to suppose that they will be even more demoralized when they face the Morningside Maroons than they were in the Ames game? Why, certainly. Sure. Also, is there anyone in, or near Sioux City, who doubts for one moment, that Morningside is represented by a much stronger team than that of Ames? Of course not. Perish the thought! What odds if Walter Eckersall still insists that the Cornhuskers are contenders for Western championship honors. Walt has never seen Morningside in action. It is barely possible that he doesn't realize that Morningside has a team this year. The Tribune also announces that straight football will be used by the Maroons in their effort to "crush" the Cornhuskers.

An equally interesting chirp comes from Topeka to the effect that IF Washburn beats K. U. next Saturday, and K. U. trims the Huskers on November 14th, THEN Topeka fans will be entirely satisfied with life. All of which goes to show that Nebraska is now recognized as the football leader of this section of the country.

Meanwhile Coach Stiehm is allowing his husky champions a rest this week, in the hope they will recover entirely from the various sprains and bruises that have been annoying them since the season began. Only light signal practices have been held so far this week. Coach Stiehm will attend the K. U.—Washburn game next Saturday, leaving the team in charge of Assistant Coach Hoeffel for the game with Morningside.

COMMERCIAL CLUB LECTURE ON THURSDAY

J. E. Miller of a Local Firm to Deliver the Address—In University Hall.

Arrangements have been made by the University Commercial Club to have J. E. Miller of the Miller & Paine Company speak before its members on Thursday evening at 7:30 in University Hall, room 207.

The subject to be dealt with is, "The English in Egypt," a resume of commerce in the far East.
