It might be well to make sure that you are not following Sam Foss's calf.

Don't promise your vote to any one. Give every candidate a chance. The candidate who first solicits you is not necessarily the best qualified.

The creation of "national security leagues" in America will mean the creation of "national security leagues" in Japan. The militarists play with dangerous fire.

Raymond E. Kirk when asked to vote for a certain candidate because he was a non-fraternity man made this answer: "There are just as many non-fraternity men who are undemocratic toward fraternity men as there are fraternity men who are undemocratic toward non-fraternity men. No one can get my vote on that basis."

SOCIAL SERVICE AND THE CHURCHES

Wouldn't it be great if the churches could be social service centers where the vital questions of the hour—such as unemployment, health, poverty, protection of children—could be freely discussed? May it not be that poor heredity, ill-chosen companions, lack of nourishing food and disease play as much havoc with people's lives as the much-preached-about "original sin?"

Yesterday while looking through some old clippings we find the following from Dr. C. F. Aked:

"The world is waiting for a new incarnation, a religion that shall be as good for the polling place as for the prayer meeting; as good for swapping horses as for saying prayers; as good for the primaries as for the presbytery. The gospel today is a gospel of social service. We may be thankful for the promises of mansions on high, but what we need is more decent homes on earth and more decent people in them. Religion is not a thing of the stars; it is a thing of the streets."

What should be the test of religion—service or metaphysical belief? Shall we judge people by their character and conduct, or by the stanchness of their belief in the fall of men, the vicarious atonement and everlasting hell for the majority? The churches are at the parting of the ways. May they choose wisely!
