THE SENIOR PARTY

The Innocents and Black Masques have inaugurated an event that deserves to become an established custom at Nebraska. An after-noon party for the members of the Senior class has been scheduled for Saturday afternoon in the Armory.

Probably at no time during the four years have all the members of the present Senior class been together at one time. In all that time there has been no social event that has been confined strictly to the members of this class, nor has there been any event that has been representative of the class to any great degree. Here is an opportunity for all the Seniors to meet and mingle once before they scatter to the four corners of the globe. Indications are that this will be one of the most interesting events of the season. Elaborate preparations are being made and every effort is being put forth to diversify the entertainment so that each one will find something of interest.

It is important that every Senior be there. Begin now to boost for it. Tell every Senior you see and urge them to come. It will be an event in your college life that in the years to come will serve to recall many pleasant memories.

WESLEYAN TONIGHT

The Wesleyan paper makes some very unfavorable comment about Nebraska with regard to tonight's game. They may have some basis for some of their criticism and then again they may not. But there seems to be a certain unfriendly feeling between the two institutions concerning our relations in basket-ball. Now, the fact that the coaches may, from time to time, disagree concerning certain details, is no reason for students and teams becoming antagonistic toward each other. If these games cannot be continued without this dissension and ill feeling they had best be discontinued. When the spirit of unfriendliness creeps into college athletics it is time to call a halt. It is the spirit of vigorous, friendly rivalry that makes college sports worth while, and it is up to the Nebraska team and rooters to go into the contest tonight with that spirit. We can't afford to stoop to unfriendly criticism; we can't afford to have any reflections of unfairness charged against our team; we can't afford to do other than treat the Wesleyan crowd in such a way that any unfavorable charges would appear ludicrous. The only way to bring this about is to avoid any appearance of evil. Then if Wesleyan continues to kick—why, let them kick.

WESLEYAN TONIGHT

earlier in the season. They commit themselves to vague excuses and generalities. "The University of Nebraska, by luck and accident, as well as for some other reasons, succeeded in taking the speedy Coyotes to a trimming in a hard fought combat on our home floor," is found in the introduction of a long article covering the many things Wesleyan will do when she meets the Huskers tonight. Another thing which the students of the Methodist school are crabbing about is the attaged attitude of our Huskers toward the rules. "Nebraska cannot play a good game without violating the rules continually, or at least the spirit of them," is also found in the Wesleyan student paper. This latter accusation seems to be the hobby of the Wesleyan mentor. Several statements of his have appeared in Lincoln papers wherein he has mentioned Nebraska as playing out of the spirit of the rules, and, in making a statement to the school as to Wesleyan's chances, says: "We have a referee who will make them play according to rules." This inclination to crab will make a Wesleyan victory all the more intolerable. Last year, when the Coyotes decisively trined the Huskers in the third game which decided the series, Nebraska made no excuses, but admitted they were outplayed, and should the Coyotes possibly win the game tonight Nebraska, having given her the best her substitutes can give her, will make no excuse for defeat.
