ARBOR DAY PROCLAMATION

The season again admonishes us that the day set apart as Arbor day is near at hand. This day has come to be recognized by many of the states as a good time to plant trees, shrubs, and thus not only to gratify our own tastes for that which is beautiful but realizing we are contributing to the welfare of those who come after us.

The trees that so gracefully shelter us from the heat of summer were planted by hands long since vanished. We should be anxious to do that in this generation that will bless those of the future.

Therefore, in keeping with the customs of the past years, I as Governor of the State of Nebraska, set apart Thursday, the 22d day of April, 1915, Arbor day, and urgently request that at least a part of this day be set aside by all the public schools and public institutions of the state for the purpose of planting and cultivating trees and shrubs, thus developing in ourselves a sense of the love of nature and all that is good and beautiful.

I would also urge upon all the people to join in making our state more pleasant to look upon by the planting of trees and thus adding to the beauty of the landscape.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the state, this 16th day of April, 1915. JOHN H. MOREHEAD, Governor.

EDITORIAL.

In accordance with the custom started a few years ago the annual Forest Club edition of the Daily Nebraskan is offered today, Arbor Day. Our organization is small compared with the others which put out supplements such as this, but the whole club was behind the "Rag" committee, making it truly a Forest Club edition.

Considerable emphasis has been placed upon the Arbor Day feature because tree planting is one branch of forestry in which everyone is, or should be, interested. The article on the profession of forestry should answer in sufficient detail the question so frequently asked, "What is the work of a forester?"

We wish to express our gratitude to the members of the Daily Nebraskan staff for the assistance they have given us in the publication of this supplement. It almost drove us wild as it was and we feel deeply for those who daily go through what we went through once. The forester belongs out among the "big sticks" instead of in the newspaper office.

STEALING MUST BE STOPPED

It is unfortunate that in a university community it should ever be necessary for the authorities to expel a student because he deliberately took property of another. It would seem that people who have progressed that far in their education would have learned to respect the property rights of others. But during the last few months many cases of stealing have been reported and the authorities have decided to use every means to stop this practice. It may seem a drastic measure to expel a student for stealing a book, but so long as the offenders are dealt with lightly there is little chance that conditions will improve.

It is necessary for the good of our University society that an example be made of the people who can be caught. The students must be brought to realize that the consequences will be serious for such deliberate wrongs. It is as important that we learn the fundamental principles of good citizenship while in college that we learn mathematics or law or history. It is to be hoped that the student body will cooperate with the school authorities and lend every aid in stamping out this pernicious practice.

Halligan, who held the proteges of Oscar Van Pelt to six little scores in the remaining five innings, and fanned nine of them to boot.

A batting rally in the third inning netted the William Graingers a run after which they rested on their oars until the sixth inning, when four more batters crossed the plate. The final score was 19 to 6, and the OVPs were at the long end of it.

MEDICS IN CHARGE OF CONVOCATION

Address and Music to Fill the Hour— Luncheon at the Commercial Club Afterward

Convocation today is in charge of the College of Medicine. Mrs. Carrie B. Raymond will play, after which Dr. R. H. Wolcott will introduce Dr. W. O. Bridges, who will speak on some subject of interest to the Pre-medics. The latter will then adjourn to the Commercial Club for luncheon as guests of the medical faculty, prominent doctors, and officers of the local society.

The Harvard Elms Doomed

The famous Harvard elms, which have shaded the college buildings for generations, are rapidly dying, and it is said to be only a question of months before the last of these splendid old trees is dead.

For several years three or four pests, to which the climate of Massachusetts seems to be beneficial, have been sapping the life of the aged trees. The leopard moth appeared in 1910, and the brown-tail moth and the elm bark beetle and the elm leaf beetle have aided it to prey upon the defenseless giants. The Harvard authorities have fought against them, but with no success, and recently Guy Lowell, the architect of New York's new Court House, and an authority on landscape gardening, declared that in the yard practically every one of the larger trees is mutilated and diseased.

To some extent, too, they have suffered because of their environment. When they were young, Cambridge was still a small place, and their surroundings did not differ so materially from the open country, but today Harvard is in the midst of a city, and its trees have suffered from the change.

Canker Killing Fruit Trees

More than one million apple trees have been killed in Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Nebraska by a disease known as the blister canker. This disease was introduced in this part of the country from the east fifteen years ago. At first it attacked the old and diseased trees, but now it is a menace in many apple orchards. The blister canker is a wound parasite. Entrance is gained to a tree through broken bark and wounds in which the heartwood is laid bare.

VIEW BOOK WEEK

You all know we have advertised our beautiful View Book of the University very strongly, yet the sale has not come up to our expectations.

Now every student surely wants one of these books, and for this week only we are going to offer a special inducement to get them started. There are 16 nice views, 6 1/2 by 8 1/2, bound in a book 11 by 13, and the price is 65c, which is reasonable; but each student who brings this "ad" with him, will receive one of these books at 15c less.

Remember the price goes back to 65c after this week
