NAUGHTY FRESHMEN

For some unknown reason many dignified Seniors were doing everything possible to avoid certain Freshmen last night. So anxious were they that they resorted to sneaking thru alleys and up back streets in order to reach their place of repose. Some of them even did not return to their rooms for the night. The cause of this sudden change of front on the part of the Seniors no one seemed able to explain. Surely these mysterious movements must mean something.

ELECTION

The University was well represented at the polls yesterday. Several students served on election boards in the different precincts and a large number took the opportunity to replenish the depleted treasury by distributing cards for the various candidates. The number of University men voting was exceedingly small. Many of the men who are eligible to vote seem to feel that they do not have enough interest in the city election to warrant their paying poll tax which they are assessed if their names appear on the poll book. In days of old men were willing to sacrifice their lives if need be for the ballot, but now they sacrifice the ballot to save two dollars.

"Who wrote that editorial yesterday?"
"Who usually writes editorial around this office?" speaks up said brave and courageous Managing Editor.
"Well, he didn't know what he was talking about. Where did he get that dope about Mike making less coin than any previous manager? Why when I—"
Interrupted by Father Sorensen, who still hangs around. "What's the argument, Bill!"
"Argument? Say, Abe, you are just the man I want to see. What was your point in hitting student council so hard in the "Student Politics" editorial of yours?"
"Now, Bill, get me right on this matter. I am not against that pet scheme of yours. I only wrote it for your own good. You will never get it across Bill, and I hate to see a good man waste his time."
