A NEW IDEA

Never before has a business manager of a university publication seen fit to allow the student customers to act as their own salesmen. Manager Grimes, of the Students' Directory, placed a number of the directories upon the campus yesterday and at noon he found twenty-five gone with the exact change in their stead. The experiment was interesting, to say the least.

Tomorrow is the day of the team "send-off" parade.

PLEASE HELP

The Nebraskan management has tried for some time to encourage subscribers to the Nebraskan to call for their paper at the post-office. Too many students, some of them subscribers and most of them not subscribers, call at the office of the circulation manager, and, after looking through the paper, (un)intentionally walk out with it. Of course, the Nebraskan will never have a real newspaper office equipment if its readers are not all subscribers. Perhaps we would do well to urge a single tax.

The "Pulse" says: "Your school paper is made possible by its advertisers." It is timely to add that a few subscriptions, to which the school papers are entitled, would also help.

BE THERE

Just because our football team has been so successful thus far into the football season is no reason why the students of the university should not continue to inspire the warriors with fighting vim. Let us not feel that the men on the team will be able to do everything themselves—they need our support and our support is a loyal "send-off." Be on hand at the east end of Memorial hall early tomorrow afternoon.

EXCHANGES

Padding is not the only method of punishment that is used by upper classmen to enforce the wearing of the Freshman cap. At the Iowa Agricultural college the offending Freshman is put through a process called stretching. A number of upper-classmen seize him by the feet and hands and throw him into the air, preventing him from striking the ground by pulling in the four directions.

At the Colorado Agricultural College there is a body of water on the campus called the Lily Pond. The first year men that fail to appear on the campus with the little green cap are baptized in the Lily Pond by the ever watchful Sophomores.

At the University of Washington

the Freshman is thrown in a lake; at Stanford he is held in a bathtub in encina until the "bubbles come."—University Daily Kansan.

Series of articles written by foreign students dealing with their home countries is to be a new feature in the columns of the Daily beginning with this issue. The foreign students in the University have been asked to write these articles, which appear in a series of ten. The writers have been given unlimited freedom in discussing anything concerning their native country which will be of interest to the student reader of the Daily. One article will appear in the Daily each day until that series is completed and then another will be begun.

In every case the author has been born in the country of which he is writing and is well informed of the local conditions. The articles deal with a great variety of subjects and the personal view of the writer has been permitted to creep in, lending more than the usual interest—Minnesota Daily.

Fraternity life and the existence of fraternities are justifiable only when the members realize that the special privileges which they enjoy make them the debtors of the entire University in a very special way. To the extent that the fraternity man (or woman) responds to the demands made upon him as a member of University society, to the extent is he being true to his fraternity and himself. Fraternity life has many beautiful things in connection with it, the friendships, the associations and all that goes to increase man's happiness through his intimate contact with man. These are its privileges.

But at the beginning, the pledge should know that the fraternity is not the most essential thing in a college life; it is a delightful incidental, but at the same time it is incidental. The thing we are here for is education in its widest sense. The problem is to keep the fraternity activity within its proper sphere. Give it that part of your time and energy which it has a right to expect of you. Keep the fraternity within its own chapter house; do not carry it around the campus with you. Remember that your University comes first in all things. Give yourself no added glory because you have been one of the chosen; you have yet to prove yourself in every way. Lead the broadest fraternal life that you possibly can. And last and most important of all, do not forget that the one best fraternity after all is that comradeship and brotherhood which is every man's debt to his fellow here on earth.—Ex.

Scott's Orchestra. Call, B-1482.

Author of Survey Bulletin

The United States Geological Survey has just issued water supply paper No. 371, on "Equipment for Current Gauging Stations," by George J. Lyon, University of Nebraska class of '99.
