THE LEGALITY OF THE SINGLE TAX

One of the points on which the regents desired information in their recent inquiries about the Single Tax is its legality. It is contended by some that this fee is contrary to the laws of Nebraska. This matter has been referred to Dean Hastings for his opinion, and his word will no doubt be final. But there is no harm in prophesying what the decision will be.

We believe that the Single Tax is legal. The constitution says little regarding the powers of the regents, leaving much to be established by the legislature. The statute outlines the powers and limitations of the board and contains a blanket clause to the effect that the board may levy such additional fees as it may think the welfare of the students demands. This means that those attacking the validity of the Single Tax must show that its adoption would be a clear abuse of discretion by the regents. Certainly a measure that equalizes the burden of support among those who receive the benefit and which encourages the students' mingling in affairs clearly educational in effect will stand the test of this clause.

No, the Single Tax is not contrary to the letter or spirit of Nebraska's laws.

INSTITUTIONAL WORK REQUIRES TRAINING

tea-room tastily on short notice, said Miss Treat.

The girl who is just graduated from school should embrace every opportunity to gain experience. The Y. W. C. A. camps, hospitals, girl's camps, all give experience which make them much more valuable. "The college girl is impatient at apprenticeship, but in institutional work we cannot go into big salaries as they do in teaching. In general, girls start lower in salary and work up. I believe institutional people gain higher salaries but that it takes them longer," declared the speaker.

After a girl has proved her apprenticeship there are any number of positions open. "The world is just waiting and anxious."

There are seven things which go to make up the necessary personality. First, executive ability is needed. The woman must have the power to direct, and to plan to have her work more efficient. Leadership is necessary. She must be dominant, not domineering. "The rank and file of employees reflect the employer."

Poise Needed

The third quality is poise, which must be not only physical, but mental and moral. She must be sympathetic, so that her employe will not be afraid of her. She must be kind. There is need of unflinching energy for institutional work is hard. "If you can't get your work into running order you will have trouble."

A woman must also have enthusiasm. In the business field the woman must have a shrewder type of business ability than a woman who is a housekeeper. She must have ability to meet people socially.

"The three essentials for success are training, experience and personal qualifications which we need to develop," concluded Miss Treat.

CONVOCATION

The annual Phi Beta Kappa convocation will be held this morning at 10 o'clock in Memorial hall. The championship interclass debate between the seniors and the sophomores on the question of the United States rejecting the Monroe doctrine, will be held, after which the announcement of the election to Phi Beta Kappa will be made.

The Daily Nebraskan is unable to print the Phi Beta Kappa selection this morning, as in past years, as the society yesterday voted not to give out advance copies as has been done formerly.

George K. Link, who was an instructor at the state farm last year, has been awarded the degree of doctor of philosophy at Chicago university. Link will return to the university next semester, and resume his duties as teacher at the farm college.
