"POLYMURIEL" An attractive costume tastefully designed, of good material and workmanship suitable for any woman to wear at any time and on any occasion, that, Mrs. Mildren Johnston Landone felt she had reason to believe, was the chief wardrobe requirement of busy women with little money, leisure and inclination to follow the vagaries of fashion. So she offered a prize of $150 for the design that should best embody her ideal, "the Polymuriel," the costume for the millions. The prize for which there were hundreds of competitors, was awarded by a committee of prominent women, to Miss Jessie Rosefield, an enterprising young lady of 20, in business for herself as a designer and illustrator of costumes for dressmakers, magazines, newspapers and advertising agencies. Since the acceptance of the design, Miss Landone has been busy perfecting the model and providing for the little accessories by means of which the costume may be variously adapted to morning, afternoon and evening wear. She does not dream that the "Polymuriel" will supplant all other forms of dress, but she feels that women should have at their command an acceptable, staple costume, that shall be at least as serviceable and adaptable as a man's suit. Her claim that a certain de-

Have you ever noticed the arms of the chairs in the various classrooms about the university? And have you ever noticed the wonderful inscriptions carved upon them? First, there is the work of someone who graduated years ago-we know that because the initials of his name which were cut lightly are not nearly so plain as the numerals which followed and were a sixteenth of an inch deep. Then, again, there are the initials of the man who belonged to the Pi Alfalfa fraternity, and then many other fraternity letters following just because the first one was there.

due, doesn't it seem a bit childish to the coming vacation. pass the time carving on the arms of the chairs instead of paying some attention to the recitation. That part of life belongs to the class in wood carving and should have been passed by long before the student ever thought of Purdue. Then, there are also the men in the classes following to remember. When you take out your knife and commence to carve think of the men who are to follow haps want to take some notes. Then, back to college next year should see, if you can allay your spirit of craftsmanship a bit and try it on your desk at home instead -Purdue Exporent.

GIRLS ARE PHONOGRAPHS

Why do girls get better grades than the men? That this is true can be seen by referring to Phi Beta Kappa elections, when the girls usually outnumber the men two to one.

The problem has been solved in the following way by one professor: "There are more men on the faculty than women; that is why. You see, the girls can smile, and men, whether they be Ph. D.'s or street car conductors, be old or young, married or unmarried, are always susceptible to a smile. (So girls keep it up.) It's milady's business to manage folks, and manage she does, and the first thing the man next to her knows, she pulls a merit, hile he pulls only an average. And then the girls are perfect phonographs. They appeal to the instructor's vanity and unconsciously flatter him by giving back in exams just exactly what he said in class. The man next to her, scorning to do this, thinks for himself. Result-a lower grade."-Ohio State Lantern.

worked and voted for every constructive measure and as Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands and Buildings, University and Normal Schools, Asylums, Schools for the Deaf, Dumb and Blind, he recommended and helped in obtaining appropriations for buildings at Omaha, Lincoln, Beatrice, Hastings, Kearney, Norfolk and Wayne. During his investigation into the affairs of the State University, he discovered that the students were compelled to purchase their books at certain book stores at exorbitant prices. He reported this fact to the Senate and House and introduced an amendment to the University appropriation bill providing for a fund for the purchase of books by the state to be furnished to the students at wholesale prices, making a saving of over $50,000 a year to the students of the Univer-Railroads are compelled to furnish
