VESTED INTERESTS IN THE TEMPLE

We have been aware, ever since we began the discussion of the Temple as a Student Union, of the fact that there are certain vested interests to be considered. The Woman's club, the University School of Music, and even members of our own faculty were all instrumental in founding and building the Temple. They have property rights that cannot be overlooked.

"A house divided against itself cannot stand." Nor can a building owned by several organizations be of use to them, when each is large enough for the whole, and when each is desirous of using it.

Such now is the situation as regards the Temple. It was constructed primarily as a building for student life. Although at first there was room for outside activities, the students now need the Temple and more. No campus organization can get use of any room in the Temple if some outside party has spoken for it in advance.

Under these circumstances, we believe that the university should close the Temple to any activity not a part of student life. The vested interests can be paid a just compensation for their property rights. The Temple is primarily the property of the university. The day when the university would need it all could have been easily foreseen by these interests, and they can have no objection to its conscription, when they receive proper compensation. The university owes such action to the students.

When these things are done, the founding of a Union will be far less complex.

AN ERROR

Due to the fact that The Nebraskan staff was unable to take charge of setting up yesterday's paper, several errors occurred. Among them was the misplacing of the two following editorials. We, therefore, take the privilege of running them again, this time in their proper place. We believe that the subject matter involved justifies us in so doing.

THE REGIMENTAL SUPPER

Those who have observed military drill this year report a better spirit toward this line of work on the part of freshmen than ever before. There are many reasons why this may be true, but we are inclined to believe that the progress of events has shown that war is not entirely impossible. Years ago freshmen regarded drill as a great task. They considered it useless, as they believed that the world had seen its last great war. But the situation in Europe has shown that drill is not useless.

However that may be, one thing is certain: anything which makes drill a more pleasant occupation, without destroying its usefulness, is to be encouraged. Drill will become less of a bore if the officers and men were better acquainted. It would be more pleasant if the men were to meet oftener as a regiment at play.

For these reasons, we believe that the regimental supper now being planned by the officers is deserving of the support of everyone in the department. It will create better fellowship; it will make the officers and privates better acquainted with each other as men. We trust that the event will become an annual tradition.

Every officer and every private should buy a ticket to the regimental supper, even if it means some sacrifice.

THE LEAGUE OF THE SECOND GENERATION

We are quite pleased with the progress this League is making. It has received the favorable comment of various faculty and alumni members.

But we had hoped for a greater response from the students. This organization must necessarily begin with the students. Without their support it will be impossible. Let us know what you think about it, whether you are eligible to membership or not. If you are so eligible, give us your name.

NON COMPOS
 MENTIS

The business manager of the Awgwan was asking for the circulation manager today. If he had looked very hard he could have seen him circulating around almost anywhere on the campus.

Somebody seems to think that raincoats hang on coat-racks to pick off, just like apples or cherries. A perfectly good coat was taken from The Nebraskan office this morning and has not been returned. Taking raincoats is a rather bad habit and might lead to trouble for someone, someday, you know.

STOUTIES, READ THIS!

You can talk of getting skinny,
 Of fasting and all that;
 But it isn't half so hard, my friends,
 As it is to put on fat.

I've eaten everything in sight,
 I've laughed until I cried,
 I've done just everything I know,
 I'm still just bones and hide.

Kind friends, if you are burdened
 With the flesh for which I pine,
 If you know how you got that way,
 Oh, please, drop me a line.

WHY, GIRLS, WHY?

Oh! the plate glass windows! What would the girls do without them? Have you ever noticed a girl when she passes a shining store window? If she is with a man, she will shyly glance at the reflection of herself, pat a curl into place, or straighten her collar. But if she is alone, the window will suddenly appear to hold many things of vital interest to her. She will stop and "study" each article very diligently, and then when she has taken a thorough inventory of them (or rather herself), she heaves a sigh of contentment, and moves on.

TOO BAD

When I sit in this not stuffy office,
 And see all the people go by,
 I think of the day that is coming,
 When I no more shall sigh.

For 'tis six more weeks till the term ends,
 Six more weeks till it's done;
 A few last hours which I cannot mend,
 And then I'm going hum.

Mrs. F. D. McVey, president of the north-central section of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, and wife of the president of the university of North Dakota, was in the city Friday, the guest of the local chapter of Alpha Phi, and of Mrs. Frank H. Woods. Mrs. McVey is a member of the Minnesota chapter of Alpha Phi. She was in Lincoln on her way to Omaha, where she addressed the Omaha branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae on Saturday. She occupied a box at the junior play, "The Man of the Hour," Friday night, as the guest of Miss Louise Pound. Mrs. McVey expects to be in Chicago this week, to attend the meeting of the national council of the A. C. A. at the LaSalle hotel.

The designs for the new terminal building for this city have been changed on account of the rapid rise in the price of steel. Steel has risen 150 per cent since last July. A type of re-enforced concrete will be used. The university was fortunate to have secured contracts for the steel for the Bessey and chemistry buildings before the advance in price took place.
