WHERE'S THE CORNHUSKER?

Where is the 1916 Cornhusker? It was promised to us by May 10. No other year has witnessed so late a production of the year book. Let's have an explanation.

THE TRIP TO OMAHA

The few who had the courage of their convictions and braved the rain to Omaha Friday were amply repaid. The reception accorded us at the metropolis was far beyond the highest expectations of the most optimistic. Not only did the city open its gates to us without reserve, but a great many of its business men and women devoted the day to our entertainment, at a great personal sacrifice. Did the University do its part? We must answer in the negative. The rain was not a sufficient detriment to take all the blame for the smallness of the crowd. Fifteen hundred would have been only a fair showing on such an occasion. It is to be hoped that if the occasion ever arises in the future the students will more properly demonstrate their school spirit.

OMAHA A BOOSTER

Omaha's attitude toward the University has always been the most altruistic. A fair example of this can be seen in the manner in which her newspapers have always been anxious to do their part in boosting the school. They do not seek for scandal that will make a sensational story, and give the people of the state a wrong impression as to what the students are doing. They publish that which is proper news, and not that which tends to be sensational without having any real news value. Furthermore, they are always anxious to publish all the news of the University, and not merely an occasional formal notice.

FORUM

 Editor Daily Nebraskan,

Dear Sir:
 On Tuesday, May 2nd, a letter was published in the "Daily Nebraskan" over my signature, in regard to Greek letter societies and other phases of University life.

I should like to have this opportunity of stating that the letter was not written by me for publication and was in no sense intended for the public. It was a personal letter to Miss Chaiken, secretary of the Alumni Association, and was given out by her for publication without my consent or knowledge.

For this reason, on learning that it had appeared in the "Nebraskan" I requested Miss Chaiken to explain that she had allowed a private letter to her to be made public. Since the request has not been complied with, I must in justice to myself, make this statement of the facts in the case.

I am sure the readers of the "Nebraskan" will realize the difference between a private letter written to a friend and a letter intended for publication.

Hoping that this explanation will make the matter quite clear, I am,

Very sincerely,
 IMOGENE McCAIG.

THE PLACE OF PERSONALITY IN EDUCATION

(By Dean R. Leland)

"Tom Brown's School Days at Rugby," and its sequel, "Tom Brown at Oxford," from a boy's point of view, are among the best books ever written. The descriptions of football, cricket "fagging" and student's pranks make these books very interesting to boys in their teens. I happened to pick up a copy of "Tom Brown's School Days at Rugby" recently and found in it more than the daily incidents of English school life. To trace the growth of Tom Brown, Harry East and all the rest toward character and manhood under Thomas Arnold the determining factor is a study in successful education.

Students often burst into recklessness and impiety the minute they feel that advice is being poured upon them by parents and teachers. Squire Brown must have known this trait in young people. Listen to his brief words to Tom the night before he started for Rugby. The father had said to himself, "I won't tell him to read his Bible and love and serve God; for if he doesn't do that for his mother's sake and teaching he won't for mine. Shall I go into the sort of temptations he will meet with? Shall I tell him to mind his work and make a good scholar? But he isn't sent to school for that, at any rate, not that mainly. If he will only turn out a brave, truth-telling Englishman and a gentleman and a Christian, that's all I want." Very good advice, but Squire Brown did not say this. He said in a very natural tone, "Now, Tom, my boy, remember you are going at your own request to be chucked into this great school like a young bear with all your troubles before you. If schools are what they were in my day you'll see a great many black-guard things done and hear a deal of foul bad talk. But never fear. You tell the truth. Keep a brave and kind heart and never listen to or say anything you would not have your mother or sister hear and you will never feel ashamed to come back home or we to see you."

"Tom kept thinking of his father's last words and he look with which they were spoken and he resolved that come what might he would never bring shame or sorrow on the dear folks at home."

This is an appeal to honor and truth through the vital touch of the deepest and best human relationships. Tom's heart responded and the fine chivalry latent in him expressed itself in word and deed. This describes an important influence in education and the best teachers that we ever have are fathers and mothers and the Thomas Arnolds who touch life in its deepest places. Those who value the power of personality in the process of education will appreciate these closing words of "Tom Brown's School Days at Rugby." "It is only through our mysterious human relationships, through the love, tenderness, purity of mothers and sisters, through the strength, courage and wisdom of fathers and brothers and teachers that we come to the knowledge of Him in whom alone the love, tenderness, purity, strength and wisdom of all these dwell forever in perfect fullness."

The close of the year or the end of a course of study is a good time to say a word of appreciation to those who have meant much to us in our education. This is the least that can be done toward paying the debt of gratitude which every student owes to those in the university and at home who have given their life to make education possible and to make it vital and of permanent value.

BRIEF BITS OF NEWS

Lutheran students meet Tuesday, at 7:30, in Faculty hall.

A joint meeting of Professor Fogg's courses in journalism tomorrow evening at 7:15 o'clock in Law 211, will be addressed by Prof. H. H. Wilson of the College of Law. Professor Wilson will lecture on "The Law of Libel from the Standpoint of the Newspaper." The lecture will be open to the public.

All personal property must be removed from the lockers in the women's locker room (S 102), by Friday, May 26. After that date any property left in the lockers will be confiscated. Arrangements may be made with Mrs. Pierce to store suits for the summer if such arrangements are made before May 26. Ina Gittings.

H. C. Luckey spoke to the students in Professor Aylsworth's class in American government last Tuesday and Thursday mornings on the "Organization of Courts," and "Reform of Judicial Procedure." Mr. Luckey has made a special study of this subject in such cities as Chicago and New York, and he gave the results of his observations to the class.

OMAHA MAKES 500 STUDENTS WELCOME

feast, at 5:30 o'clock, was followed by a varied entertainment, in which "Galatea" with her dances starred, and the symphony orchestra made a big hit. Then ragtime music was started by a tuneful colored orchestra, and the auditorium floor was cleared for an informal dance.

It was a most happy day. E. V. Parrish, who first conceived the idea and who planned it throughout, was the busiest man in Omaha, receiving the students and taking care of them. He was ably assisted, however, by a score or more of alumni, headed by Dean I. S. Cutter of the medical college, president of the Alumni association. Vincent Haskall, W. C. Remsaw, Samuel Reese, jr., Amos Thomas, Frank Bullta, C. E. Foster, Sam Cotner, L. A. Higgins, L. W. Charlesworth, Dr. C. A. Meyer, Dr. R. A. Moser and C. A. Bennett were among the reception committee.

WHAT we'd call "determination" in ourselves, we of'en mistake for "bull-headedness" in the other fellow. But we don't ever mistake real, true geniality in a man or a tobacco.
