Company C, commanded by Captain M. H. Schlesinger, won the annual competitive drill of the state university cadets on Nebraska field yesterday afternoon, displaying one of the most finished drills ever given by a university company. Company A, under Captain V. C. George, was second, and Company B, Captain K. Y. Craig, third.

Sergeant Earl B. Douglas, of Company G, won the individual competitive drill, and First Sergeant Byron Rohrbaugh, of Company E, was second. The individual drill followed three hours of drill under the hottest sun that shown down upon a compet, and the judges were quick in thinning down the men.

CLASS WORK AT UNI. WILL END TODAY

SECOND SEMESTER NEARS END—
EXAMINATIONS AT HAND

Commencement Week Will Be Marked by Renewed Activity—
Pageant a Feature

Regular class work for 1915-16 at the university will end today. Examination schedules have been distributed during the week and are still available there.

The examinations commence tomorrow, when the freshmen rhetoric and romance language classes will take their examinations. They continue during next week, concluding Saturday.

Spring football practice on Nebraska field ended last week, and the Missouri valley track and tennis meets tomorrow will bring those phases of university athletics to an end. Nearly all of the university societies of different kinds have elected officers for next semester and completed their business for the year.

Week after next will see a renewal of activity on the campus. Monday and Tuesday will be the day of the second pageant, "The Gate City," for which Professor Scott has been rehearsing a cast during the past month. The old grads will begin to get back to the university Monday, June 5, for their reunion stunts on the 6th.

Commencement exercises will be held June 7, Wednesday. Bliss Perry, professor of English literature at Harvard university, will deliver the commencement oration. The subject of his address has not been announced.

CORNHUSKER AGAIN DELAYED BY STRIKE

Once more, on account of the express men's strike in Chicago, the Cornhusker management had to announce yesterday evening that the Cornhusker would not be issued this morning. A telegram from Chicago received by Assistant Business Manager Blunk yesterday said that a shipment of the books would be made Friday, however, so it is possible that some of the annuals may be out for the interfraternity baseball championship to watch bulletin boards for more definite announcement.

NEBRASKAN'S LAST REGULAR ISSUE TODAY

Today's number of The Daily Nebraskan is the last regular issue for the present school year. A special pageant number will be issued next week, however, which will be distributed to all subscribers.

STUDENT COUNCIL WINS BY LARGE VOTE

Voting Students Are 4 to 1 in Favor of Both the Student Council and the Single Tax

The Student Council and voluntary Single Tax propositions were overwhelmingly endorsed by vote of the students yesterday, the sentiment being almost 4 to 1 in favor of both propositions. The vote of approximately 350 is considered a fair showing, in view of the half holiday, competitive drill and other things that deterred the students from casting a large vote.

The votes for the committee of five who are to draft a Student Council constitution and submit it to the students for ratification next fall, were not counted yesterday. They will be counted today, and the nominations announced by Registrar Greer.

COMPANY Q IN SHIRT-TAIL PARADE

PREPAREDNESS SPIRIT OF THE
CADETS MADE KNOWN

A Bon-Fire and Wienie Roast on the Campus Topped of Evening's Celebration

"Company Q" held its annual parade last night—and thereby hangs a tale. In fact, the historic shirt-tail parade again made Lincoln citizens aware of the fact that at the state university preparedness for defending this nation is receiving its due share of attention. Three hundred and fifty cadets paraded the streets with their shirt appendages swung to the breezes, went through the principal hotels, stopped at some of the soda dispensaries, and entered places of amusement.

With the band in front, and Captain Schlesinger's crack company, C, leading the procession, the parade left the university armory at 7:30 last evening. The men wound through the downtown business district, snake-dancing to the tunes of the reinvigorated band that had blown so valiantly all afternoon. Cornhusker yells and songs, company yells, and just common ordinary joy whoops were sent up to the heavens by the university soldiers.

Welcomed Downtown

In the business district a warm welcome was found on nearly every hand. The Lindell and Lincoln hotels were visited, the former serving punch. The theatres, Orpheum, Oliver and Lyric, were seized in turn, and the cadets paraded across the stages before the admiring and applauding audiences, and the indulgent smiles of the actors. Some of the drug stores were entered, and Wilson's and Piller's showed their good feeling by giving refreshments of punch at the former and sandwiches at the latter.

The Lincoln Traction company contributed its share to the fun in the way of trolley-grabbing, and rare was the car that found its way down O street while the cadets were near, that kept its trolley on the deadly third rail.

Foreign Labor Opposed to Student Council

Unexpected opposition to the Student Council developed yesterday morning on the part of the few laborers at work on the Bessey building.

The man carrying the sign announcing the voting place for the Student Council election strayed over to the building where a few foreigners were at work. The laborers saw the sign, and being unable to read the legend it bore, they thought he was one of the strikers. The gang started to "get" the sign carried, but he managed to escape safely and to continue his rounds in security.

Chancellor Avery will give a report at this time.
