YESTERDAY'S ELECTION

Yesterday's election is indeed gratifying to those interested in the Student Council. While the number voting is not all that could be hoped for, it is of sufficient size to indicate a keen interest in this important issue.

As said before, everything was against securing the proper vote. It was a holiday, only the usual small Thursday classes being in attendance on the campus. There were several examinations in progress. There are many to come next week, and the students as a whole are winding up the semester's work. The question was in the most unattractive form, since it settled nothing definitely. The election was held in the registrar's office, which was closed for a part of the day. No active candidates in the field robbed the election of its usual human interest.

Under these circumstances, no one can fail to interpret the vote cast as indicating an affirmative desire on the part of the students for a Student Council. Such indication having been given, a council for next year is assured. Patience must be shown, as the constitutional convention must be selected and given time to report before the council can be elected. But the students should not count such time as lost, when the institution is as important as it is.

On the whole, therefore, it must be said that the students of the university of Nebraska want both the Student Council and the Single Tax.

NOT OUR SWAN SONG

We have begun many policies during the semester which must, of course, be disposed of before we reach the end. The decision of the staff to publish an issue next week gives us more time on these points. In next week's special issue, therefore, we will tell the students just what we have accomplished along the various lines of endeavor during the semester.

SHELDON LECTURES TO GEOGRAPHY 28 CLASS

Director A. E. Sheldon, of the legislative reference bureau, delivered a lecture to Professor Bengston's class in geography 28 yesterday morning, tracing some of the earliest history of this section of the United States. Prof. Sheldon showed photographs he had taken of ruins of prehistoric villages in the Nebraska bad lands, as well as in other parts of the state—notably Richardson county.
