

JOHNNY EVERS PEEVED

Couldn't Stand for Umpire Byron's Song Solo.

Arbiter Sings Decision in Verse and Chorus—Some Picturesque Characters Mentioned Who Are Help to Pastime.

It was very easy for aggressive and high-strung Johnny Evers to get peeved when Bill Byron called him out on strikes and accompanied the ruling with a song solo. It is tough to be called out on pitches, but when the umpire sings the decision in a verse and chorus, there is small wonder that Evers said something which caused him to apologize to Mr. Tener. However, picturesque characters like Byron, Germany Schaefer, Nick Altrock and Steve Evans are a help to the game, and Byron should be permitted to sing as often as he wishes.

While mentioning the comedian Steve Evans it is timely to recite a humorous incident in which Evans was the central figure in Toledo the other day. Steve has been playing for Roger Bresnahan and recently he was given a whipl at second base. One of the opposition who is said to be the slowest man in the league, hit almost to the fence and got a single. On the first pitch to the next batter, the catcher threw the ball hurriedly to Steve at second.

"What are you throwing down here for?" shouted Steve as he caught the ball. "Why, he's trying to steal," exclaimed the surprised catcher. "He might be trying to steal," answered Evans, "but he's not in sight yet."

"SLUGGER" JACK MURRAY

Jack Murray, former outfielder star with the Giants and Cubs, has been hitting a hot clip with the Toronto International league team. Jack has been the team's best bet through their climb upwards and looks good to return to fast company.

EXCUSE SIMILAR TO GIANTS

Pitchers Laugh When Batters Offer Alibis for Shortcomings—One From Braves is a Bird.

"It gives us pitchers a laugh," said Tom Hughes of the Braves, who recently pitched a no-hit, shut-out game, "to hear the batters excusing their shortcomings. Do not think for a minute that the Giants are original in their grumblings over conditions at the Polo grounds. Braves are springing one that is a bird. There are no signs on the fences of the Braves' field, remember, and no question of lights and shadows. But our players are not stumped for an excuse. They say that the outfield fence is too low, that when a southpaw is working the ball comes out of a bright sky to the plate and that when a right-hander is working the ball comes out of the scoreboard to the batter. Can you beat it?"

CALLAHAN IS HARD WORKER FOR PIRATES

SKIPPER OF THE PITTSBURGH BUCCANEERS.

Jimmy Callahan has the sympathy of Pittsburgh fans in his fruitless endeavors to get some real baseball out of the bunch of material that he has at his command, writes James J. Long in Pittsburgh Sun. Certain it is not due to any lack of effort on Cal's part that the club is not playing better ball. No manager or player ever worked harder for the success of the club.

The skipper is out on the field with the men in morning practice every day and misses no detail of the exercises; it is the same during preliminary practice in the afternoon, and from the time the game starts until the last man is out he is the busiest and hardest working man on the lot. He talks to and tries to encourage the players by going to and coming from their positions, and Pittsburgh's turns at bat in every inning finds him out on the coaching lines trying everything to get the Pirates started on a rally or to direct the runners around the bases.

Unlike McGraw and some other pilots, Cal does not pose on the lines when his club is winning and hide himself when it is behind. The score doesn't make any difference to him. If his team is ten runs behind he is out working all the harder. The Pirates have played some ball that would drive many a manager to a madhouse, but Callahan has been even tempered and untiring through it all.

DIAMOND NOTES

Jean Dubuc is pitching grand ball for the Tigers.

Appropriately enough, Otto Knabe has piano legs!

"Jess" Barnes continues to be the mainstay of the Braves' pitching brigade.

Connie Mack's ball team this year has been welcome everywhere but at home.

"Bert" Niehoff continues to be the star of the Phillies, both on offense and defense.

So far Cincinnati has not made the slightest hint as to C. Mathewson's successor.

Leslie Mann, the Cubs' outfielder, is better than ever, according to "Joe" Tinker.

The manager who makes a pennant drive must hold a tight rein over his players.

Harry Davis steps in and manages the Athletics whenever Connie Mack goes a-scouting.

Mathewson is playing golf as often as he can, for he wants to forget his managerial troubles.

Fred Luderus, the Phillies' first baseman, is said to hit the ball as hard as any man in the game.

Did it ever occur to you that the player with the most speed at night is the slowest in the daytime?

"Connie" Mack denies the report that he has agreed to sell "Joe" Bush, his star pitcher, to the Tigers.

The Cubs have signed a young Pittsburgh rookie named Beil. He ought to make good if he doesn't crack.

If Matty fails to release the Reds from last place, the Cincinnati directors may offer the job to Houdini.

Somebody had the wrong dope when he said the Browns lacked a punch. Isn't a Davenport a "sleep producer"?

If a baseball manager owned all the pastimes in the world he would still want "just one more winning pitcher."

Some people will continue to believe that Matty threw his greatest "fade-away" when he signed with Cincinnati.

After twelve years on the job Bill Klem sagely remarks that umpiring is no sinecure. Most of it is just pure sin.

WAS ROOTING FOR BROTHER

Harry Coveleskie, Star Southpaw of Tigers, Forgot Himself in Recent Cleveland Game.

If there is any one person who is pulling with might and main for Stanley Coveleskie to make good as an Indian, it is Brother Harry, the star southpaw of the Tigers.

Harry was sitting on the Detroit bench when Brother Stan was mowing down the Tigers in a recent conflict. It was in the fourth inning and Cobb was on first with none out and Bobby Veach at bat.

"Atta boy, Stan, atta boy. Guess that brother of mine hasn't got something," he yelled as Veach fouled to Turner.

"That's it, Stan. You've got his number," he muttered as Sam Crawford hit a roller to Howard, forcing Cobb at second.

"Say, Harry, if you are going to root for Cleveland, go over on the Cleveland bench," shouted Oscar Vitt.

Brother Harry was dazed for a minute. He had forgotten Brother Stan was pitching against his own team.

"Say, fellows, I clean forgot," he said sheepishly and then he yelled as Hellmann went to bat: "Hit it outa th' lot, Harry. That busher ain't got a thing but a prayer."

"It sure was funny," said Trainer Harry Tuthill of Detroit in relating the incident.

PICKED UP ART OF THROWING

Player Can Keep His Arm Strong by Carefully Avoiding Pegging for Grandstand Fans.

"Where did I learn to throw? That's easy," said Harry Hooper, outfielder for the Boston Red Sox. "I just naturally picked it up when I was a kid on my father's ranch in California. I was just like any other kid—wanted to throw stones, and by constant practice, during my spare moments in the fields, became a sort of dead-shot. Oftentimes I would get the range of a rabbit and bowl it over with a stone.

"The training I got as a kid wasn't wasted, either, for when I broke into baseball I could peg them as well as any of the fellows who had seen years of service.

"A man doesn't have to be a giant to throw a baseball a great distance. If he doesn't try for grandstand pegs, he should always keep his arm strong."
