Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Convocation was postponed yesterday morning because there were not more than forty people in the Memorial hall. Not only were the students absent, but the professors, too, forgot to come. Was it because they did not know about it? Surely the notice had been on the bulletin long enough.

Convocation is held twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, in Memorial hall, and programs have been arranged by the convocation exercises committee for the benefit of everyone, and everyone should take advantage of them. They are not only instructive, but entertaining and the men and women who are gracious enough to give their time and the benefit of sometimes years, of work should be treated with the utmost enthusiasm and courtesy.

Let us hope that in the future every convocation hour will find Memorial hall filled with an interested intelligent audience.

The first mixer of the season will be given in the armory next Saturday evening, and it's going to be a "regular" one, to start the year right. If you dance, come; and if you don't dance, come. It will be a party for everyone.

Did you know that the Oregon Aggie band was one of the chief attractions at the San Francisco exposition, and that our band is going out to Portland and play rings around them if we all get busy and buy our tickets to the benefit dance, October 13?

The person who knows every little thing that happens is generally the one who has encouraged someone else's talking, by first saying quite a bit himself.

Are you wearing a girls' club membership tag? There are about fifteen hundred girls in school, so, the campaign slogan, "On to 600," ought not to be hard to bring to a reality.

How do you do? How do you shake hands? Do you lay a limp bunch of five fingers into the other person's grasp and mumble some conventional phrase with an air of concerned unconcern, or do you look him squarely in the eye and give him a good honest handshake that's a hand shake? One of the easiest ways to discover a person's character is to shake hands with him, for if he has a wishy-washy handshake he'll be that kind of a person—and vice versa. How do you do it?

BRIEF BITS OF NEWS

D. H. Propps, a member of the Nebraska extension service, is at the Gage county fair this week.

Professor Frandsen, head of the dairy department at the state farm, leaves for Alliance, Neb., today, to be one of the judges at the Box Butte county fair.

Sixty or seventy boys and girls at the state University school of agriculture showed their determination to get an education by working part or all of their way through school last year, according to an estimate made by Prof. H. E. Bradford, principal of the school. Pretty nearly every kind of labor imaginable was performed by students last year. Girls worked in kitchens, helped with housework, or waited tables. Boys got up early to fire furnaces, do chores, or sweep offices. It is expected that more students than ever before will work their way through school this year, if an expected increase in attendance materializes.

Prof. George R. Chatburn of the department of applied mechanics, was elected president of the American Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at its annual meeting held at the University of Virginia last summer. Professor Chatburn has been a member of the council and was formerly vice-president.

Dr. M. F. Arnholt, who had charge of the class in anatomy last year, left yesterday for Michigan to study for his Ph. D. degree.

The Food of the Collegian

(By Alice M. Loomis, Head of the Department of Home Economics.)

The physical condition of college students has not been entirely neglected, while students in elementary and high schools are inspected and nursed, and provided with playgrounds and lunch rooms. Athletics and physical education departments have done much, but it is the living conditions of the students that in many cases decide the general health.

If adequate dormitories cannot be provided for students some effort can be made to provide food at moderate cost. College dining halls are found in most of the large universities. The cafeteria is a rather recent effort to provide food at a low cost by having the student serve himself. Across the street from Harvard university is a thriving cafeteria which has no connection with the university, however. In the University of California a wealthy patron has arranged for a cafeteria for girls, where each one washes her own dishes. The small patronage shows that it is not the kind of service desired.

The disadvantage of the cafeteria service is evident—the lack of any home atmosphere and incentive to social conventions. The advantages are equally apparent—the students' opportunity to choose from variety of foods, quick service and lower cost than usual. The free choice may really be an advantage or an unfortunate thing depending upon the student's ability to choose foods wisely.

Recently a student in this University, who was taking medicinal iron, chose a luncheon of white bread, milk, ice cream, jelly and white cake. She passed the custard and other egg dishes, the asparagus, spinach and string beans, all of which would have given her the iron she needed.

Students usually show the most judgment in their choice of meat substance. Eggs, beans and cheese dishes are very sensibly chosen in place of meat. Not so much wisdom is shown in the choice of starchy dishes and green vegetables. Potatoes and rice are sometimes taken in connection with an abundance of bread and all of them contain much starch. It would be wiser to substitute a green vegetable for either the rice or the potatoes. While the green vegetables and fresh fruits do not give much food value they are needed for their variety of mineral matter and as "preventive medicine."

A menu "eat and grow fat" would not contain coffee and tea for all of their nourishment is in the cream and sugar added to them. Inexpensive foods with high food value are beans, bread, potatoes and gravy, rich cake, peanut butter, hash and milk.

DEAN GRAHAM AT Y. M. C. A. VESPERS

Declares Association Work One of the Biggest Movements for Women in the World

Miss Mary Graham, dean of women, declared at the Y. W. C. A. vespers yesterday before a large audience of University girls, that "The Y. W. C. A. is one of the biggest movements for women in the world."

Miss Graham reviewed the scientific discoveries in regard to the creation of the world and man, and showed how scientific discoveries tend to bring all fields of work together—piling up evidence that there is one big truth in this world—the truth of God.

Truth and God

"Don't be afraid of truth," she said. "Truth and God are so close together that if we get close to truth we get close to God." The speaker urged a respect for truth among the girls, and urged them not to neglect their spiritual development.

Ethel Stone was the leader of the vespers. The large attendance indicated that the girls are getting into the Y. W. C. A. vespers habit. Probably a hundred were there last night.

A quartet of Esther Ord, Ora Neff, Mildred Gillilan and Eliza Gabel furnished music.

CHORUS REGISTRATION LARGE, BUT STILL ROOM FOR MORE

Although the registration for chorus has brought more good voices than ever before, the number is not yet as large as in former years, Mrs. Raymond announced yesterday.

Registration will be held open a few days longer without extra charge. As announced before, the chorus will rehearse at 5 o'clock on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. For men who drill or who for other reasons cannot make the 5 o'clock rehearsal, special rehearsal will be held Monday evening from 7 to 8.

THE LIBRARY CONGESTION

To the Editor of The Daily Nebraskan: The University organization should be ready to adjust itself to the growing needs of the student body which it serves. The number of students in attendance at the school this fall is larger than ever before, and yet library facilities have not been increased to correspond to the increased number of patrons of the library.

At the end of practically every class period one may see a row of students standing in line from the reserve desk in the library almost to the entrance doors, waiting for a chance to secure reference books. Those on the end of the line have to wait fifteen and twenty minutes, or even more, to get a book, losing valuable study time. The congestion, which is more noticeable this year than in the past, is probably due to a more extensive use of the reference books in class assignments.

By inserting another window at the reserve desk and employing another assistant, the congestion could at least be cut in half.

ALUMNI NEWS

Vesta Foxworthy and Frances Bodkin, who completed a two-year course in the University last spring, are teaching in the Newport high school, which has recently been accredited. Miss Foxworthy has been elected principal. Both young women expect to re-enter the University next fall.

David W. Swan, law, '15, is with the law firm of Johnson & Ramsey in Omaha.

Wade H. Wilson, law, '15, is connected with the United States department of justice office in Lincoln.

EMPHASIZE DESIGN IN HOME ECONOMICS WORK AT THE FARM

High school girls of the school of agriculture at the state farm, are for the first time, to have work in color and design, under Mrs. J. D. Hoffman, an experienced teacher of design. First year University girls in home economics are required to take the fundamentals of designing under Miss Mundy.

This work is given because of the increasing importance of design in all home economics work, especially in clothes making. It is probable that Miss Grant will give a course in costume designing at the state farm, in line with this other work. All simple flower designs made under Miss Mundy's direction will be used later as a foundation for practical work.
