Believing that University students need recreation through the week end, and that many indulge in unprofitable recreation for want of something better, the University authorities are going to give dances in the Armory throughout the year. They will not be mixers, but regular dances, for University folk. There will be no "stags"—and tickets will be bought at the door.

The University dances are an innovation at Nebraska and bid fair to be very popular.

There are two well-known sayings that contradict each other, "Look before you leap," and "He who hesitates is lost." How about it, wise men?

There are a great many students who go to their classes every day and at the end of the semester hardly know their professors.

Several times in the past there have appeared articles which deplored the neglect of alumni to visit their professors when they return to the University or to Lincoln. The fault lies with both the student and the professor. Both are timid and hesitate to make any advances of friendship.

The professors are human and need sympathy and understanding as much as the students, and the daily routine of both would be brightened by an occasional cheery word or friendly chat out of class hours.

NOISE AGAIN

The rattle and the noise
Outside the old law shop,
Is sure a useless nuisance
And must be made to stop.

Epp had the right idea
With his anti-noise campaign;
To put a Maxim silencer

Perhaps our worthy Ed.
Will put the matter through,
And earn the lasting gratitude

DEMAND TEACHERS OF BUSINESS

MISS GERTRUDE BEERS SPEAKS TO BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB

Speaks from Point of View of Commercial Teacher in Business College

"The demand for teachers in the commercial field greatly exceeds the supply," stated Miss Gertrude Beers, principal of shorthand at the Nebraska school of business, in her informal talk to the University Business Women's club yesterday afternoon.

"Those who teach the commercial work get at least $20 more per month than the other high school teachers," Miss Beers said. "None need accept a position for less than $100 per month, who has finished the course, and the course may be completed in one year."

More Independence

The reason Miss Beers gave for the higher wages paid commercial teachers was that these teachers are much more independent. Boards of education realize that if they do not pay in the nine months as much as the teachers can get in twelve in the business world, that they cannot hold them.

Miss Beers explained what was expected of the commercial teacher. She must teach everything from a business standpoint. Arithmetic, geography, English, typewriting and shorthand must all be made definitely practical.

Small Town First

Miss Beers advised the inexperienced teacher to go first to a small town, and later to a large city, if she desires. She concluded her talk by showing how the commercial teacher in high school is helping those who need the help, for they usually are boys and girls who must earn their own way and cannot go directly to college.

FIRST GUNS

PASSED OUT TO CADET ROOKIES

The first batch of guns for the rookies in the cadet regiment, has been passed out, and some of the first year drillers are already becoming expert in obeying the order to "port arms," "present arms," and "right shoulder arms."

The guns are the old army Krag-Jorgensons, now in the discard for regular service, but still worth while as a means of teaching the young university idea how to shoot.

Following the example of other colleges, a rifle team is to be formed at Colgate university.—Exchange.

800 STUDENTS HEAR BEETHOVEN SYMPHONY

FIRST OF A SERIES TO BE GIVEN
UNDER MRS. RAYMOND

Interpretation by Professor Dann
Declares Whole is Charming
Music

Approximately 800 students and members of the faculty attended the first symphony program given at convocation yesterday under the direction of Mrs. Carrie B. Raymond. "The attention of the audience," Dr. Winifred Hyde said, "was perfect."

These series of symphonies show Beethoven's development, and in order to get full benefit from them every one should be attended. The following is the interpretation written by Prof. W. F. Dann:

The Interpretation

This symphony, written in his earlier style, is formed in part on a searching study of Mozart. Beethoven had previously subjected himself to a rigorous training in counterpoint under Albrechtsberger, a strict and dry master. The present symphony clearly exhibits the results of such study and discipline, at the same time giving proof of independent and original genius.

The short introduction begins, irregularly enough, with a discord not belonging to the key of C major, and it has sudden changes from forte to piano—a frequent characteristic of Beethoven's style. This slow movement soon leads to the principal theme of the Allegro with short, staccato phrases. This is reiterated several times in modified forms, and then gives place to the countertheme which, as usual, presents a marked contrast in manner to the principal theme. The "working out" with various modulations of these two themes follows (in this symphony neither very extended nor elaborate), and then the original theme in the original key re-enters with full orchestra fortissimo.

Contranuptial Studies

The Andante shows the influence of his contranuptial studies. The opening melody, presented by the violins, is answered in canon form by the violas and cellos. Later on a soft, monotonous drumming of the bass gives a rythmical background for a staccato figure in triplets.

The sprightly Menuetto is easily followed. Beethoven's sense of humor finds expression in this movement as well as in the opening of the final Allegro, where the violins seem to be timidly searching for the right note of the scale, but having at last found the last high tone and thus made sure of the ground, they rush off in a mad, joyous whirl.

The whole symphony is charming music. Neither tragedy nor overwhelming sadness is suggested, but brightness, clarity, and grace run through it from beginning to end. The clouds in Beethoven's life had not yet gathered.

PROF. FOGG AT LINCOLN HIGH SCHOOL BOOSTS "ADVOCATE"

Professor Fogg was invited to speak at a special assembly of the 1,300 students and the faculty of the Lincoln high school yesterday morning. The meeting was in the interests of the Advocate, the weekly publication of the high school, which has been re-made into newspaper form. Professor Fogg's subject was "The Lincoln High School and Its Newspaper."

The professor emphasized the value of a high school newspaper properly conducted. It provides opportunity for practice in writing with a definite end in view and thereby supplements the regular class room instruction in the writing of accurate, clear, interesting English. A high school paper also promotes school spirit.

Principal Jesse Newlon declared that Lincoln aims to put out the best high school newspaper in the United States. He has set aside and furnished a large room to be used as the office of the Advocate.

150 CO-EDS AT INFORMAL TEA

At least 150 girls attended Dean Mary Graham's informal reception at Faculty hall yesterday afternoon. As Miss Graham was out of town, Lulu Mae Coe, '16, assistant dean of women, presided.

Catharine Dodge, '18, poured the tea and Helen Husted, '18, and Genevieve Bechter, '18, assisted with the serving. The reception was most informal, and gave the girls a splendid opportunity of getting acquainted with each other.

Abraham Lincoln Said

"When any church will inscribe over its alter, as its sole qualification for membership, "Thou shalt love thy Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thy self," that church will I join with all my heart, and with all my soul.

This church accepts the religion of Jesus holding, in accordance with his teachings, that practical religion is summed up in love to God and love to man.

We cordially invite to our working fellowship any who, while differing from us in belief, are in general sympathy with our sprit and practical aim.
