COMMERCIAL CLUB SMOKER SATURDAY

PRESIDENT WILSON FAVORITE 36 TO 22 IN STRAW VOTE

Hinds Urges Progressive Policy—Economics Department Faculty Members Speak

A straw vote, in which President Wilson was favored for re-election 36 to 22, was one of the features of the first get-together meeting of the University Commercial club at the city Commercial club Saturday night.

Sixty members of the club attended the meeting. They were addressed by Professor J. E. Rossignol, Professor G. A. Stevens, and D. F. Cole, assistant in the department of political economy. Cider, doughnuts, and cigars were served.

Members of the club voted to dispose of 100 hand ball tickets.

Hinds Gives Inaugural

Before introducing the speakers, President Hinds delivered his inaugural address, urging a continuation of the progressive policy of the past and suggesting several reforms.

Professor LeRossignol spoke of what he termed "group loyalty" which, he said, formed the basis of such an organization. Without it, school and national patriotism could never succeed. He said that ardent loyalty to one group did not forbid membership in another society, nor loyalty to more than one. Professor Stevens spoke of the danger of losing one's ideal while in the University. He said that every student should do some real, active, spirited work for some worthy cause.

It was announced that Secretary W. S. Whitten of the Lincoln Commercial club would speak at the Thursday afternoon meeting of the club in U. 142.

So many things are on wheels, nowadays, that it is scarcely surprising to learn of a school in California that is held in a box car. There children whose fathers comprise a railroad section gang are being taught daily, and the school is proving such a success that the superintendent has asked for an old passenger coach, which will be fitted with benches and blackboards. Such a car will be easier to heat, and the school will be continued when cooler weather comes. The story is matched by one from Blackburn College, Carlinville, Ill., where two Pullman sleeping cars have been transferred to brick foundations, near the college buildings, where they are used as dormitories. Their popularity with the students is easy to understand. As David Copperfield said of the old barge which Mr. Peggoty turned into a house, "Never having been designed for any such use, it became a perfect abode."—Christian Science Monitor.

The current number of Everybody's Magazine publishes a section entitled "Keep Posted," contributed by the Ridgway Company of New York. In this section is an article entitled "Strides in Student Soldierly," which is of interest to university people because of the contemplated step here of established military training, and because of the fact that Company I, Second Indiana Infantry, and the medical corps and band of that regiment are composed mainly of students in the university.

The article tells of the formation of the Harvard Regiment, the famous Yale Battery of field artillery, the new $10,000 armory at Cornell equipped for two full regiments, and also of the fact that such conservative schools as Cornell, Dartmouth, Bowdoin, and Williams have added military training to their curricula, and that Princeton has a course in it as an upper-class elective.—Exchange.

SENIORS TO WEAR DERBY HATS

The most recent custom to be established at Montana State College is the donning of derby hats by the senior class. This comes as a result of the meeting of the senior class Wednesday afternoon. At that time it was almost unanimously voted to adopt that custom. The upper classmen will soon appear on the campus with a special designed derby hat. After that time no other students besides the seniors will be allowed to appear on the campus with this particular style of hat.—The Weekly Exponent.

GOLF AT INDIANA

A new six hole golf course has just been laid out at I. U. The course is close to the campus and is expected to be very popular with the student body. A student golf club will be formed immediately and to date 100 have signified their intention of joining.—Exchange.

GRIDIRON CURRIED

All freshman students at the University of Washington are turning out Saturday mornings to help clear the new athletic field of rocks, level the gridiron, and roll the track. These freshman turnouts are similar to the annual spring Campus Day when all classes turn out to clean up the grounds. All classes are suspended on that day.—Exchange.

THE KNOCKER

The following definition of a knocker is taken from a Missouri newspaper. It is so clearly and forcibly put, so elegantly worded, and so classical that comment would only tend to detract from the spicy, clear-cut description which follows:

"After God had finished the rattle-snake, toad and the vampire, he had some substance left, with which He made a knocker. A knocker is a two-legged animal with a corkscrew soul, a watersogged brain, and a combination backbone made of jelly and glue. Where other people have their hearts he carries a tumor of rotten principles. When the knocker comes down the street honest men turn their backs, and angels in Heaven take precipitate refuge behind their harps and the Devil harlocks the gates of Hell."—Missouri Brunswicker.

COLLEGE SENDS OUT FORECASTS

Daily weather forecasts will be sent out by wireless from the Kansas State Agricultural College beginning Wednesday. With the exception of the forecasts put out at night from Washington, D. C. for the particular benefit of naval stations, this is the first time anything of this kind has been attempted.

"Dozens of stations will pick up the forecast," said J. O. Hamilton, professor of physics and weather observer, today. Several stations including those at Bennington and Logan have asked for this service. There are many amateur stations in Kansas. This means that in numerous cases towns which receive the forecasts by mail will get them several hours in advance of the usual time.—Exchange.
