BRIEF BITS OF NEWS

The regents book store has already sold more than $5,000 worth of text books to the students at cost of buying and distribution. This is about one-fourth of the total amount usually disposed of during a school year, the two city campuses, and the state medical college at Omaha, selling approximately $20,000 worth of books during the year.

The attendance at the informal dance at the Armory last Saturday night was so good, considering the handicap of a number of previously scheduled affairs, that another party will be given soon. The custom would seem to have been started here, and perhaps the students will make the dances fortnightly affairs or monthly events, as is done in some schools not far from here.

The University observatory was open again last night, and a good sized crowd of students and townspeople heard Professor Swezey give a short popular lecture on astronomy. The telescope was available for a glimpse of the moon.

The next general University mixer will be held on the evening of October 27. The mixer committee is already at work preparing stunts to be given, and planning on making the party as popular as the first mixer proved to be.

Students of the agricultural college are planning to have a mixer this fall in the big horse barn, where the dance during the days of Farmers' Fair last year was given. The mixer will not be limited to agricultural students, if it is given, but the whole University will be asked to take part.

Senior law students will start this week to work on practical legal problems, helping the city free legal aid bureau handle its cases. Dean Hastings and Sterling F. Mutz, assistant city attorney, arranged for the work. The students will be given credit in their college for what they do.

The fall season for picnics is not yet over, many parties of students having journeyed to nearby groves Sunday for wiener roasts and other stunts that go with the open air parties. Both Penn Woods and Stevens creek east of the city are full of charming spots for a picnic.

The Daily Nebraskan office lighting system went out of order yesterday afternoon, causing the staff to knock off from its labors a half hour earlier than usual, and return to the Library in the evening for the final wind-up of the work.

The cold weather yesterday marked a change in the direction of the long line of hungry students and faculty in the evening for the final wind-up of the work.

The engagement is announced of Roma Rush, '18, to Doane Turner Pickering. Miss Rush is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi.

Daphne Stickle, '19, was taken seriously ill with appendicitis Sunday. She will be taken to her home in Kearney tomorrow, if able to make the trip.

Arline Ivers of Omaha was the guest of Vernie Powers this week end. Miss Ivers is studying medicine at the Nebraska university medical college in Omaha.

Irene Kirchstein, '15, left last week for Cornell university to work on her doctor's degree. Miss Kirchstein was offered scholarships at Harvard, Bryn Mawr and Cornell.

Sigma Phi Epsilon entertained Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shaw, and members of the Denishawn company at dinner Saturday evening at the chapter house. Mr. Shaw was a Sig Ep at Denver university.

Among the girls who were maids at the Ak-Sar-Ben ball in Omaha last Friday night, whose names were not previously mentioned in The Nebraskan, were Marion Whittaker, '19, and Madge Daniels of Ord, an alumnus.

Waiting to be served at the cafeteria. Instead of running down stairs and out on R street, the line doubled back into the Temple theater building, where the students could keep warm while they waited to get to the "bread line."

Judge Lincoln Frost, '86, a member of the board of control of state institutions, talked upon "Should the Nebraska Legislature Provide for State Custodial Farms for Petty Prisoners?" before Dr. G. E. Howard's sociology seminar yesterday afternoon.

Next Monday Judge Howard Kennedy will speak of the "Work of the Board of Commissioners for Control of State Institutions."

ALUMNI NEWS

An interesting letter has recently been received from Frances Botken and Vesta Foxworthy, who are teaching in the high school at Newport, telling of their narrow escape from a prairie fire which threatened to destroy the town.

School was dismissed and the boys were sent to fight while the girls were supplied with buckets and gunny sacks to fight back the fire and keep the flames from crossing the road and setting fire to the town. Thirty-five haystacks were destroyed and for hours the fire burned fiercely, although everyone who was able fought as hard could. People along the edge of town who were in immediate danger, packed their household goods into wagons and prepared to move out. Suddenly, after hours of labor, the wind changed and the fire was gotten under control.

Miss Botken writes that it was the most exciting experience she had had for many a day and that it will not soon be forgotten, although, except for scorched face and hands, there was no serious injury to anyone.

Peter H. Thompson, '99, one of the most successful literary men whom Nebraska has ever produced, died Sunday, October 1, at his home at Minden, of acute paralysis. Mr. Thompson took his A. B. degree here in 1889, receiving a fellowship in the German department. He taught in this department while working for his master's degree, which he received in 1894. He spent several years abroad in study and was appointed assistant professor at Grinnell College, Ia.

Mr. Thompson as a man of considerable literary insight and translated German verse into English with facility. Last year a group of his translations appeared in Poet's Lore and attracted very favorable comment. For some years he has suffered from acute paralysis, yet all this time he maintained a singular optimism and did not lose interest in his literary activities.

Marguerite R. Burke, '08, who teaches German in the Omaha public schools, spent last week end visiting her mother in Lincoln.
