Dr. Phil Dale, '09, Described War Conditions To The Farm House

Dr. Phillip Dale, '09, who has just returned to this country after spending over a year in a British base hospital in northern France, visited the Farm House Tuesday evening. After dinner he gave a very interesting talk upon present war conditions. After finishing at Nebraska, Dr. Dale graduated from Rush Medical college, and practiced in Chicago until June, 1915, when he went to France with a hospital unit of American doctors and nurses. His post was at Etaples, a village on the English Channel, thirty miles from the firing line.

Modern medical science is saving the lives of hundreds of thousands of wounded soldiers, according to Dr. Dale. Every soldier upon receiving any wound, is given an injection of anti-tetanic serum. The efficacy of this treatment is shown by the fact that of the 70,000 cases which passed through Dr. Dale's hospital, there were only four deaths from tetanus, while careful bacteriological examination showed the presence of the tetanus bacilli in from 8 to 10 per cent of the wounds. It later developed that of these four deaths, two had accidentally not been given the serum.

Artillery Important

Dr. Dale says the most important role in the war is played by the artillery. The accuracy obtained by modern artillery is marvelous. He cites two cases of his own observation; one in which a great German gun destroyed a British gun emplacement 50 feet square at a distance of twenty miles. In another instance, a stretch of road 600 yards long was shelled from a distance of seven miles with such accurate marksmanship that shells exploded in the center of the road without damaging the hedges at the side.

The stupidity sometimes shown by the gunners is truly inexplicable. Dr. Dale cites the case of a certain stretch of road down which a German gunner played a stream of bullets from a machine gun every evening at 7 p. m. After discovering this fact, whenever the English wished to use this road at 7 p. m., they merely divided their column, and marched down either side of the road in perfect safety.

The Ultimate Result

As to the ultimate result of the war, Dr. Dale looks for the success of the allies. The English, whom he characterizes as slow to start and slow to stop, are now heart and soul in the conflict, and will never rest until victory is theirs. He thinks that the war will be stopped only by the exhaustion of human material.

The lessons which the United States should draw from this war, Dr. Dale thinks, are that we should have a navy second only to England, and a standing army of about 500,000 men, with a reasonably well organized citizen soldiery. He would have the standing army predominantly of the artillery branch. It takes only about six months to train an infantry army, but two years are required to train artillerymen.

Dr. Dale will visit a few days in Lincoln and at his home in Greenwood, and will then return to his medical practice in Chicago.

NOTRE DAME UNIVERSITY HAS

SPLENDID CAMPUS

The University of Notre Dame du Lac, the school which again looms large on Nebraska's football schedule, has buildings at Notre Dame, Ind., valued at $2,200,000, a library of more than 65,000 books, and eighty instructors.

"Notre Dame" is Old French for "Our Lady," and is the name of many churches in France which were dedicated to the Virgin Mary, particularly the Cathedral in Paris. "Du Lac" signifies "of the lake."

Notre Dame du Lac is a Roman Catholic institution for men, established in 1862 and chartered in 1864. It comprises departments of arts and letters, science, architecture, civil, electrical, mechanical, mining, chemical and architectural engineering.

journalism, law and pharmacy and a preparatory school.

Notre Dame's football teams have brought her wide recognition in athletic circles. In recent years her elevens have been especially noted for their long trips.

YOUNGSTERS ON

ATHLETIC FIELD

MAKE COACH WORRY

Small boys who ask no greater pleasure than to romp about during the late afternoons on Nebraska athletic field are adding to the worries of Dr. E. J. Stewart, as the Cornhusker coach smooths off the rough edges in the University's football machine.

During the last practice before the game with the Oregon Aggies the coach several times called upon players in the inactive list to shoo the youngsters away from the danger

HERE ARE SOME SANDWICH MENUS FOR THAT PICNIC

Although yesterday's snow may have temporarily put an end to picnics, the following sandwich recipes, from the department of home economics, are printed in the hope that they may prove useful:

Prunes and English walnuts. Chop, moisten with thin syrup, and season with salt, paprika, and lemon juice.

Dates, figs and almonds. Grind, moisten with orange juice, and press into baking powder can. When ready for use, turn out mixture, slice, and place between slices of bread.

Raisins and English walnuts. Chop and moisten with whipped cream. Use as filling for whole wheat bread.

Pimentos, hard cooked eggs, and grated cheese. Moisten with boiled salad dressing.

Grated cheese, pounded almonds. Moisten with whipped cream or mayonnaise. Use with brown bread.

11 AG COLLEGES TO BE REPRESENTED AT NOVEMBER MEETING

Some thirty representatives from eleven state agricultural colleges and experiment stations will meet here for the fourth annual session of the Association of Western Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, November 10 and 11.

This meeting precedes the national meeting of agricultural educators and experimentalists at Washington, D. C. The representatives will gather at Lincoln for a two-day program and then proceed in a body to Washington. Most of the sessions will be held at the University farm here.

R. E. NOYES, '04, DIES IN EAST OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS

R. E. Noyes, E. E., '04, died October 18 at his home in Pittsfield, Mass., of infantile paralysis. Mr. Noyes, who was in the employ of the General Electric company, moved from New York for fear that his children would catch the disease. He was attacked by the malady that he tried to escape and died after an illness of only three days.
