If we beat Ames 3 to 0, how about Kansas and Notre Dame? Doesn't look very bright does it?

O-o-o-o-o my-y-y! Sounds like a wail of lost souls, but it isn't. It's the last line of the only song the quartet knows.

The rooting Saturday was the best ever, but it couldn't compare with the rooting of the Iowa aggregation. Why not have regular rooting sections, and then follow the cheer leaders. There is quite an advantage in that, you know.

Did you notice the men who uncovered their heads when the band played America—and the ones who didn't? Another indication of character.

When the band plays a Nebraska song, every loyal Nebraskan should be on his feet, with his hat off. The Ames men did it.

At least we can say that the members of our team don't swear so loud that they can be heard all over the field. Swearing may help a man play but it certainly puts him in a ridiculous position, at least, in the opinion of the audience.

Why not have both the men's and women's rooting sections on the south side of the field? United rooting is absolutely necessary, and when the girls are in one or another place as is usually the case, and the men are scattered around, we cannot expect good results. There is no reason, anyway, why the girls' section should be on the north side of the field, with the sun pouring over them. No one can blame the girls for going to a more comfortable place, and as a result, the girls' section is never very full. If they could sit in the shade, as the men do, they would appreciate the opportunity to get together, and away from the showers of cigar ashes, et cetera.

One of the biggest arguments of the anti-prohibitionists is that prohibition will increase taxes. It should decrease the expense of the upkeep of courts, poor houses, asylums, homes for dependents and defectives which are fed by the saloons, and thus decrease taxes. It is an argument of the "wets" that is pretty weak.

Five years ago today Captain Shonka was put off the Ames field for "unnecessary roughness" which was nothing less than some real live pep and not dirty playing as some claimed. Have you heard of anything like that here, lately?

A straw vote will be taken among the students today, to determine the attitude of the students in the coming election.

The result will show a great many things. It will show the general student opinion; it will show the effect of certain teachings which they imbibe in their class rooms; it will show whether university men or women have convictions of the right kind and whether they think.

The women's vote will be an interesting feature. It will show whether the women would vote if they had the franchise. And it will be a big argument for woman's suffrage—perhaps.

THE DAYS GONE BY

Washington.—The budget for the university for the next two years has been estimated at $1,884,910. This includes the cost of erecting several new buildings. A raise in the salaries of faculty members is also contemplated.—Ex.

There are eight Y. M. C. A. gospel teams at Oklahoma which are going about the state conducting revival meetings and giving speeches on any spiritual subject called for by the towns visited.—Ex.

The sophomore class in the State college of Washington unanimously decided last week to permit no more hazing of freshmen. While the expression of disapproval of all manner of violence toward the babes, was general, the action was especially aimed at the former usual custom of "padding" the first-year men.—Ex.

Political speeches will be a part of the practical training of the public speaking classes at Indiana university. Students will deliver addresses over the state for the party they support. In exchange for the service the campaign committee of the party supported will pay the expenses of the trips.—Ex.

Ohio State university is the proud possessor of a brand new wireless station. It was installed for the use of the engineers and aside from the practical work of that department will be used to pick up messages from ship stations and points along the Great Lakes and the Atlantic seaboard.—Ex.

E. Pettit, professor of astronomy at Washburn, has found that Washburn is off the map. The campus was laid out by the government surveys in the wrong latitude. The college observatory is nearly 160 feet east of where it isn't.—Ex.

P. JAMES COSGRAVE

District Judge P. James Cosgrave was born at Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 28, 1871, but has made Lincoln his home since March 12, 1884. He graduated from the Lincoln high school in June, 1889; from the Michigan university (Ann Arbor) college of law in 1891, and from the post-graduate law school in 1892. He served as captain of Company I, First Nebraska, in the Philippines during the Spanish war and the Philippine insurrection. Judge Cosgrave was elected and served as police judge of Lincoln for three terms, then county judge two terms, when he became district judge. He is now serving the fifth year of his first term as district judge.

He has made good as a district judge and the people of the county respect him for his fairness, good judgment and legal ability.

If continued service should be the reward for honest and conscientious duty in the service of the public, Judge Cosgrave should receive little opposition for a second term from the voters when they cast their votes on the seventh day of November.—Political Adv.
