BRIEF BITS OF NEWS

Prof. S. B. Gass, head of the rhetoric department, spent a part of the Christmas holidays in Chicago.

Edith Woodburn, who graduates this February, has been elected principal of the Shelton High school. She will teach German also.

S. D. Babbitt, instructor of rhetoric, spent the first week of the Christmas vacation visiting his brother at Verdigré, and the latter part in Spring Valley, Minn., visiting relatives.

Workmen have been riveting the channel-iron supports to the rods that have been run through U hall to reinforce it. When the work is completed the building, which was built in 1870, will be good for another half century.

One of the interesting features of the Organized Agriculture week in Lincoln this winter will be the annual meeting of the Nebraska Hall of Agricultural Achievement on January 17, where Nebraskans who have contributed to the advancement of agriculture in the state will be fittingly eulogized.

Lee Metcalfe, brother of Ted Metcalfe, a senior student in the law college, has been appointed private secretary to the governor, Keith Neville, the latter announced yesterday afternoon. He was elected first assistant chief clerk of the state house, but will leave this position for the higher honor conferred upon him by the governor.

The annual six weeks' short course in the business of farming will be offered by the University this year from January 2 to February 13. Results of experiments and collected data covering all the lines of agricultural advancement will be taught the busy farmers, both old and young, who have not had the opportunity to come to the University to take a regular course in agriculture.

The annual Nebraska state corn show will be held in Lincoln, January 15 and 16. It is conducted by the Nebraska Corn Improvers' association, and offers three hundred dollars in cash prizes for the best exhibits of Nebraska corn for the year. Separate classes for experienced exhibitors, for exhibitors who have never won a first or second prize, and for boys and girls under 18 years of age have been provided.

The German Dramatic club gave a successful performance of the comedy "Pension Schoeller" at Sterling, Neb., on the evening of January 2. The Germans of the state expressed both surprise and pleasure over the fact that students, some of whom had not taken up the study of German before coming to the University, had acquired such fluency in the pronunciation and expression of the language. The finishing touches are being put on the five-act drama, "Emelia Galotti" which will be presented in the Temple theatre January 12.

The College World

Yale recently decided to economize in the matter of expenditures on athletics. Harvard has decided that such a course for itself is unnecessary at present. Editorially, the Harvard Crimson discusses financial matters at Cambridge as follows: "In 1913-14 the disbursements of the H. A. A. totaled $238,000, an increase of $30,000 over 1912-13. Football cost $20,000 in 1908, $31,000 in 1909 and 1910, $30,000 in 1912, $34,000 in 1913, and $36,000 in 1914. The steady increase in expenses has evidently been paralleled at Yale, and the end is not yet in sight. On account of this the Yale committee has found it advisable to limit the expensive paraphernalia and high-priced coaching systems that have come to be regarded as necessities for athletic success. At Harvard the increased cost has been due in a considerable measure to the large and constant growth of the number of men who participate in athletics. In 1914, 1,472 men were so engaged; in 1915 the number had grown to 1,847. Everyone who desires is now given an opportunity to work on a squad, even though he stands the smallest chance of ever making a university team. Valuable as this policy undoubtedly is, more athletes mean more athletic supplies, more coaches, and consequently more expenses. At the present time the finances of Harvard athletics are in a comfortably sound condition. Rising expenses have been more than matched by an increased income, and it has not been found necessary to impose any burden on either graduates or undergraduates. In consequence, there is likely to be little enthusiasm in Cambridge for such a limitation of the athletic armaments as the Yale committee desires."—Ex.

Yale and Harvard may play their annual chess game this year by wireless. Heretofore it has been the custom to hold the contest through the medium of the mails. By the old method it took some weeks to finish a single game, while under the system proposed at present, it may be finished in a mere matter of hours.—Ex.
