DR. LUCKEY DENIES HE IS UNPATRIOTIC

gation. To the point blank question of whether he was loyal to the president of the United States and in sympathy with the cause of democracy, he replied in the affirmative. When definitely asked to tell what he had done in support of the war, in order to determine the truth of a report that he was not so enthusiastic as he might be, Dr. Luckey would only say that he had given what he could afford. Independent investigation shows, however, that he purchased as many liberty bonds as any faculty member with the exception of Chancellor Avery, that he also contributed liberally to the Red Cross, the Armenian and Serbian relief, and the Y. M. C. A.

The following questions, put to Dr. Luckey by The Nebraskan, were answered affirmatively:

Are you in sympathy at heart with the cause of democracy?

Are you loyal to the president in his war policy?

The following charges were denied by him:

Have you, to your knowledge, made unpatriotic statements to your classes?

Have you ever intentionally compared American and German government to the detriment of the former?

Did you have anything to do with the petition circulated in your classes which declared that you had neither taught nor said anything unpatriotic?

Letter From Dr. Luckey

The editor of The Nebraskan has received the following letter from Dr. Luckey, in connection with the reporter's interview:

"Dear Mr. Beede: For some time I have been under criticism in the very field I pride myself of being strongest. I do not know the animus and intrigue that are promulgating it, neither have I the time nor inclination to ferret them out. I am too busy and too much in earnest trying to make the young men and women more efficient and able to live better and truer lives. I am aware that anyone who really thinks and gives expression to his thoughts will meet with opposition, but in a democracy we should expect justice and fair play. I am not a formalist, and in speaking I am attracted by the thought and try to make clear my ideas without being conscious of the particular words in which they are clothed. For this reason the pure formalist may not see the truth that lies hidden.

"I think it is only fair to the conscientious doubters for me to state that I am absolutely sympathetic with the president in this war and deem it a great privilege to have such a worthy and trusted leader at this critical time. I have complete confidence in his wisdom, judgment, and genuine sympathy for humanity, and from the first I have lived in harmony with this truth. As for the other criticisms I have nothing to say. Fortunately for my friends my past life has not been shady and will bear the closest inspection.

"Sincerely yours,
"G. W. A. LUCKEY."
