Mrs. Jessie Beghtol Lee

Time was when the college girl was supposed to do one of two things—she could bone hard and get herself a P. B. K. or she could dance and wield a feather fan at proms. But no girl was ever supposed to do both. This was the happy day when all ladies were supposed to be afraid of mice and faint at the sight of blood. But owing to a number of things—largely the passing of time and the unceasing demand made by women for recognition in every phase of life—this has all been changed. Women can make munitions, they can run factories, they can plow farms—and they not only can do it but they are doing it every day of their lives. And the college woman, in practically every case, has been the forerunner and the instigator of the work to be done. And not only can the college woman work to point and purpose, but she can play, keeping the rules, and obey the dictates of the referee and umpire quite as well as anyone.

The members of the Women's Athletic Association, and the players, competing for awards in that sport managed three successful tournaments this season—the Inter-Sorority, the Rainbow and the Inter-Class. These tournaments enabled one hundred and fifty girls to compete in actual playing for prizes, gave healthful and pleasant recreation for many more, and proved conclusively that girls' athletics, when managed by girls of character and discretion, can be made one of the most important influences of college life.

Delta Zeta Wins

In the Inter-Sorority tournament, Delta Zeta, with Blanche Higgins, Grace Nichols, Peggy Downing, Helen Dewitt, and Gertrude DeSautelle playing, defeated Chi Omega, represented by Beatrice Koch, Camilla Koch, Bess Sherman, Margaret Cowden and Bess Cheney. The Rainbow tournament resulted in a victory for the Purple, Pansy Read, Annabelle Ranslan, Lillian Wirt, Nellie Bloodgood and Patricia Maloney defeating the White, with Emma Fenzel, Alice Schott, Louise Pedrett, Hazel Edwards and Lillian Anderson defending that color. The inter-class tournament was a marked victory for the seniors, that team, with Beatrice Dierks, captain; Ermine Carmean, Camilla Koch, Grace Nichols and Blanche Higgins defeating the juniors, the runners-up, by a very lopsided score.

It is a tribute to a well managed sport that it will attract the style of girl who plays basketball at Nebraska. During the entire season of play there was never the slightest dissatisfaction displayed by a single girl—no team ever stooped to an un-sportsmanlike trick to win—and never was deliberate fouling indulged in by a player. The tournaments began on time, were played off as fast as they could be played, entirely under the management of the Women's Athletic association. This takes considerable executive ability, endless tact and much more work than most people would care to undertake.

Players Develop Skill

The good old days when it was funny to speak of a woman's aim are decidedly gone. They seem to be doing everything better these days—they can heave plates through windows and balls through loops as well as anyone. Ermine Carmean managed to hit the little hoop fourteen times during the interclass tournament—and she had a good guard in the way all the time. Camilla Koch located the basket eleven times during the same games—and she did it at top speed against a clever opponent. Grace Nichols—with the characteristic vacillating feminine mind kept her attention on the game well enough to prevent a single goal being made by her by her opponent during a whole tournament. And the good old argument, "girls are poor losers" received a knockout blow when the sorority cup was won by the Delta Zetas by a single goal—and won in perfect peace and good feeling.

In all, the basketball season, with its splendid record of players and play, is a credit to the University of Nebraska, to the Women's Athletic association, and to the skill and the fair play of the girls of the whole school.

lege basketball. The University of Nebraska is a school in which every high school boy of the state should be interested, and when the youths from out-state are given the opportunity to see the U. of N. play the game that they themselves are here to play, it is expected that they will avail themselves of the chance.

Both games will be played in the afternoon, the varsity games starting at 3:15 on Friday and at 4:15 on Saturday. The freshmen games will begin at 2 on Friday and 3 Saturday. Friday an admission of 25 cents will be charged to all the contestants in the tournament who wish to attend, but the games Saturday will be free to all those who are entered in the tourney. Coach E. J. Stewart urges all the visiting basketball players to turn out and watch and help the Cornevery respect and the management assures the students that they will appreciate every assistance that is given them toward the accomplishment of this purpose. There remains but a short time in which to make the final arrangements for the book before it is published and the notices therefore which are being given now are to be final so they should receive due consideration. It is hoped to have the annual in the hands of the students at an early period and this cannot be accomplished unless proper co-operation is given by the campus inhabitants.

Organizations have also been negligent in either making their payments at the Townsend studio or returning their proof which will require the most urgent attention of the presidents of these associations. By failure to comply with these conditions these organizations are delaying very materially the publication of the book. Following is a list of those societies who have either failed to make payment or return the proofs to the photographers:

- Electrical Engineers.
- Mechanical Engineers.
- Girls' Club Board.
- Latin Club.
