"While a university function is not interpreted as a public dance Miss Amanda Heppner has demanded that all university parties comply with the city ordinance."

This statement from Saturday's Lincoln Star is misleading, if not a downright mis-statement of facts. Parts of the dance ordinance do apply to all university parties. Other parts apply only to dances for which tickets are validated.

Dean Heppner has not demanded that all university dances comply with all parts of the ordinance as the Star infers. University authorities do not expect students to comply with parts of the ordinance which do not include them. Such a statement creates a false impression among students and is unfair to our dean of women.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE CHANCELLOR

President Wilson in his address to Congress on February 11 said:

"The method the German chancellor proposes is the method of the Congress of Vienna. We can not and will not return to that. Is it possible that Count Von Hertling does not see that, does not grasp it, is in fact living in his thought in a world dead and gone?"

Count Von Hertling in his address to the Reichstag on February 26 reports as follows:

"President Wilson, who approaches the German chancellor with a certain amount of backwardness, seems to me in his views of ideas to have hurried far in advance of existing realities."

These two quotations illustrate the difference between the American and the German standpoint.

America does demand something beyond the existing realities that Germany has created—demands a better day, the observance of the rules of civilization, an honorable rule of national conduct, freedom and justice to small nations, to all people, which do not exist today because of German kultur.

Germany insists upon a return to and perpetuation of fraud and tyranny and ruthlessness, a disregard of justice to small nations, indeed to all nations and peoples, a conscienceless rule of international conduct. These things may not yet be "dead and gone" but they will be "dead and gone" when this war is ended. The difference between the two positions is the difference between a future safe and free and just, and a past cruel, unjust, treacherous and tyrannous, the difference between American ideals and practice and German kultur and atrocities.

Will Hold Pre-Easter Revival at St. Paul's

Pre-Easter revival meetings, to which the students are invited, will be held at the St. Paul's Methodist church every night this week, except Saturday. Dr. W. E. J. Gratz will preach and Mr. Harry Omar will lead the singing.

LINCOLN QUINTET STATE CHAMPIONS

fight for the honors failed to materialize into any very great menace to the Lincolnite's designs although they put up a game but losing battle.

In the semi-finals, Omaha showed real class and whalloped the tar out of the far famed Fremont team, Lincoln doing likewise to the bunch from South Omaha. In class B semi-finals Oakdale cleaned up on Schuyler, while Shelton sprung a surprise by cleaning house on the Husky Nebraska City lads.

The Finals

The game which attracted the most interest was naturally the finals of Class A. Both Lincoln and Omaha had made enviable reputations during the season and the fray promised to be a battle royal, with the odds of the Lincolnites. But the affair proved to be rather less of a fight than was expected. The light Omaha five was in no way a match for the husky warriors of the Black and Red. Lincoln scored a field goal within thirty seconds after the game had started and before the first half had ended they had run up five more in addition making the total score 12 to 4 for Lincoln. Omaha came back in the second half with a determination to win or die in the attempt and it must be said that they made a mighty brave finish. But the superior weight of their opponents told heavily on them and the game ended 29 to 13.

The biggest star of the game by far was Jungmeyer of the Lincoln bunch, although both Lamb and Chesney of the same team will run him a strong race for the honors. Smith of Omaha, the runt of the Class A team in size played a wonderful game for the lads of the metropolis, and made one of the gamest fights of the whole tournament.

In Class B there was even a greater walk away than in Class A. Shelton proved the master of ceremonies, and led the bunch from Oakdale a merry race with the odds all their own way. Oakdale couldn't get near to the goal and had to content themselves with long shots from the center of the floor which it is sad to say very seldom had any serious effect in raising their end of the tally card. The big noise of this game was the Shelton right forward Harold Conroy. He played a great game and made a total of 8 goals and 3 free throws. His teammate of the central position ran him a close race by making a total of 19 points towards the team's grand total. For the Oakdale gang, Haines the center was the main squeeze, although he nearly jeopardized his position by making four personal fowls.

Plenty of Pep

Not to be outdone by their older sisters, the lower classes displayed plenty of pep in the final and semi-final rounds of the tournament. The Bayard-Gretna game and the Boelus-Randolph mix-up both were unique in that they made it necessary to play several periods of extra time before the game could be decided. They ended with Boelus winning in Class G and Gretna cleaning up on the Bayard aggregation. Osmond and Scribner beat up on Culbertson and Sidney respectively each by the tune of 17 to 16, while Exeter lost to Hardy in Class C by a score of 14 to 12. By far the biggest sensation of the tournament in the lower classes was the showing made by the Ravenna five. The out-state lads were placed in Class D but they so far out-shone anything in that class that they could have made a strong bid for the honors with any team in Class B and even with most of those in Class A. Lentz, their star left guard, was one of the best guards in the tournament irrespective of class, while their center made things hum in that position.

All in all the tournament was a big success in every way, and Nebraska should be proud of the fact that she is the originator of such an event.
