DENTAL COLLEGE NOW PART OF UNIVERSITY

Department of Dentistry Now in Operation As a Separate School

A school of dentistry is now in active operation at the University of Nebraska. The dental department as an integral part of the university was established at a recent meeting of the board of regents when they accepted the Lincoln Dental College and its equipment as a gift from its owner, Dr. W. C. Davis. The transfer has been satisfactorily adjusted and the work of the school is now in full progress.

The dental college was organized in 1899 as an affiliated school with Cotner university with the name of "Lincoln Dental College of Cotner University."

In 1904 it was reorganized as Lincoln Dental College and in April of that year became associated with the University of Nebraska, in an educational way, which association was maintained till 1915, when the students of the first two years of the dental course became university students, with the senior students having no university connection, which condition obtained at the time of complete absorption.

High Rating

During all these years the school has maintained the highest standards and at the present time has the highest possible rating by the National Association of Dental Examiners. It is a member of the National Association of Dental Faculties and the diplomas of the school have been given full recognition wherever an American diploma is received. The students will continue to attend the same departments, in the university, they have in the past, with the added advantage of having the classes in these departments tempered more specially for their needs as prospective dentists.

The establishment of this school has not put the university to any great expense as the departments used, (bacteriology and pathology, chemistry, physiology and pharmacy, rheologic, zoology, anaecomy and histology) are already going departments, fully equipped and with complete teaching forces.

Faculty Taken Over

The faculty of the Dental College was absorbed with the school. The additional expenses of the increased University faculty is fully covered by the income from the school. Investigation proved that the school was being conducted at a profit and there is no reason to believe that its operation should show a deficit. There is offered a four years' course leading to the degree of D. D. S.

There is also offered a six year dental course looking to the degrees of B. Sc and D. D. S. The first two years of the six year dental is substantially that of the first two years of the six year medical course.

By this arrangement students starting out on the six year schedule may at the end of the first two years choose either the medical or dental course at their option, or even abandon the professional courses altogether and by two more years' attendance receive the B. Sc. only.

This arrangement is of great advantage to those young men who desire advanced education as preparation for a professional life, as well as to those who desire to take university work and have not fully decided as to the profession they wish to follow, for after two years of university work they are then able to choose or even change their plans as to medicine or dentistry or even abandon both and complete the B. Sc. course without a single lost hour of work.

There is at present an enrollment in the four-year course of about 80 students. There are about 70 students enrolled in the pre-medical and dental course, some of whom have already announced their intention of electing dentistry at the completion of the two years' preparatory work. The fees for the four years' course are $150 each year. The fees for the first two years of the six-year dental are about $20 each year. The last four years are $150 each year. The entrance requirements for the four years' dental course are thirty high school credits with no conditional entrance allowed.

DAILY DIARY RHYMES

"THE FALL OF ROME"

I want a little counsel, folks,
I want a little cheer;
I'm a victim of outrageous pokes,
And the story? Listen here:

A sweet young girl was walking
With both arms full of books,
The kind that's always talking
And remarking of your looks.

She was headed toward the iron gate,
While I sauntered at her heels,
When it happened like a stroke of fate,
Like slapstick of the reels.

She glanced about to ascertain
What kind of boob was I;
When she bumped the gate and fell
In pain,
Fell face up to the sky.

The books in one arm headed east,
The others headed west;
Although her fall was not the least,
Her face was far the best.

She looked up like a startled deer,
Like the stepped-on tail of a pup;
While I eased my grin from ear to ear
And ask to help her up.

She scorned me, folks, right pertly,
too,
As she gathered up her books;
While she read me mad acts, old and new,
Like the Warden to his crooks.

She left me then, she'd played her ace
To whom does the blame belong?
I'm only stating the facts of the case,
Do you think that I was wrong?
