UNI NOTICES

Ushers for Game Thursday
Men who care to usher for the last game to be seen on Nebraska field will be given opportunity to sign up for this game at the student activities' office. Office open from 8 to 12 each day.
Vespers
The Thanksgiving service of the Y. W. C. A. will be held as usual at the Woman's hall at five o'clock Tuesday. An especially attractive program has been planned. Dr. F. S. Steine will speak, and Miss Mirian Little will play the 'cello.
Reservations for Notre Dame Game
—All students of the University who hold season tickets, must reserve their seats for the Notre Dame game before Wednesday evening. The seats may be reserved free of charge at the College Book Store.
After Wednesday an extra charge will be placed on the reservations for seats.

ALUMNI

Lester L. Dunn, '18, is in the service of the navy and at present is connected with naval communications. He is stationed at Brooklyn, N. Y.
Col. C. C. Culver, ex-'98, invented and perfected a wireless telephone by which American aviators may talk to persons on the ground. He was stationed in 1916 at Rockwell field, San Antonio, with the rank of captain when he perfected the phone. This wireless telephone is considered one of the most amazing inventions that helped win the war for the allies.

The following is an extract from a clipping from a San Diego paper sent to Miss Chaiken by Col. Culver's sister, Mrs. Bryant R. Simpson:
"The Germans were completely baffled after the aero-phone was installed on American planes, which accounted for such a marvelous series of air craft victories on the American front in the closing days of the war. American aviators were directed from the ground, the mechanism is of such a nature that the human voice, when transmitted to or from an airplane, can be plainly heard above the roar of the motor. Wireless telephones were employed in active service on the western battle front for some weeks before the armistice was signed. "The wireless phone can be worked over a distance of several miles, it is understood."

DAILY DIARY RHYMES

"THE CRAB"
This world is full of a lot of guys
That crab from morning till night,
What streak of humor that ever lived,
Has been blotted clean out of sight.
Now I'm not a man to look at the world
And say I exceed the rule;
That I am the only perfect man,
That the other men play the fool.
But I know a man that's a human crab,
The hard boiled sort of a kind;
It would seem no good ever crossed
his path,
From the mad exploits of his mind.
With the hang-down mouth of a bowery tough
And all that goes with the look;
A specimen I thought was extinct
Except in the run of a book.

But here, my friends, is the genuine,
With the mess too poor for his gills;
The bed too hard, and the blankets
thin,
Make a few of his crabby ills.
Now to tire my pen in his useless
howls,
Would be but little to add,
For his jabbering grouch only adds
the same
Applied to the good or bad.
Yet I write these words for I only wish
That misfortune could only be his;
Instead of the mountain he makes of a hill
And the things that are none of his biz.
And then do you think it would enter
his head
That things were fair in their style,
And regardless of what may please or
displease,
It is best to go 'round with a smile?

O, THOSE REVOLVING DOORS

(By request of the author of "Hand Grenades," the regular headline will be omitted from this article. She states that the story is not up to par.)
Since so many buildings are possessed of revolving doors, you suppose they must have some advantages, but every encounter with such doors makes you wonder the more as to what are these aforesaid advantages.
For an example of such an encounter take your little experience of yesterday afternoon. You started out to do your Christmas shopping early. You acquired packages, and yet more packages, of varying weights and sizes. You started for home via the revolving doors, but others were starting too, and it required several moments of artful dodging and active jumping, to launch you on your way through the door.
A little demon, embodying all the mischief of Tom Sawyer and Penrod, edges his way into the door just ahead of you, and started to run swiftly and furiously around and around, clutching your packages like grim death itself. After about five minutes of such exertion, the youngster sped on outdoors leaving you to gather your scattered packages as best you could. Gathering the scattered packages was not such exhilarating sport as one might imagine for others were also determined to get through the door, and many and rude were the bumps you received. The appearance of a very disagreeable floor-walker who in curt tones insisted that you step lively did not add to the beauty of the situation.

Yes, there must be some advantages to such doors, but what, oh, what, are they?

TWINS CLUB MEETS
Glenn and Gayle Pickwell Elected Presidents for Present Semester

The members of the Twins club met at the home of Misses Ruth and Esther Jones, 1701 L street, Saturday evening.
A business meeting was held and Glenn and Gayle Pickwell were elected presidents, Elsa and Louise Pierce, vice-presidents; Ruth and Esther Jones, treasurer, and the Wolfe twins, secretaries, for the semester. The club readopted the French orphan twins for this year.
Refreshments and a short entertainment followed the business meeting.
The club is planning to meet again Saturday, December 13, at 1018 Douglas street. All twins are cordially invited to attend. If you are a twin, you are a member of the club. Please come.

ENGRAVINGS OF BELGIUM
CATHEDRALS EXHIBITED

An exhibition of engravings of Belgium cathedrals has been hung in room 310 of the library, and is open to the public daily, and from three to six p. m. on Sundays.
The art department has been reorganizing its collection of casts and providing a new set of labels. In addition to the usual label on the front a second is put on the back giving more details of interest. In order to stimulate interest in the pictures in the art gallery, additional information in regard to the picture and the painter is being placed on the back. This is not done in any other gallery.
