called off, and Illinois university and the Great Lakes Jackies were approached on the subject. Agreements were nearly completed but never could be brought to a head. Finally, when the Notre Dame fray was forbidden, the Turkey day date was offered to the Hoosiers and they immediately accepted. Balloonists Sub for Tigers

The Missouri Tigers were slated to entertain the Huskers at Columbia, November 9, but a few days prior to the game, it was called off, and the Omaha Balloon school was nabbed for the date.

With a big yellow balloon, an airplane, a brass band and a little black bear mascot, the Balloonists invaded the Cornhusker camp and went back with a 19 to 0 drubbing plastered on their backs. The Huskers clearly outplayed the observers with Schellenberg and Captain Hubka starring for Nebraska. Howarth and Schellenberg scored the first two touchdowns and the third was shot over by a pass from Howarth to Swanson after a long charge down the field.

Huskers Duck the Jayhawk

With a green backfield, the Cornhuskers took on the Kansas Jayhawkers the following Saturday, November 16, and like a couple of eels, they swam, skidded and floundered in a drizzling rain. When they dug the gumbo out of their eyes, they found the score to be 20 to 0 in Nebraska's favor. It was one of the worst games ever attempted on the Husker gridiron. Within ten minutes after it started, the players were so completely smeared with slime that neither side could be distinguished from the other.

The Huskers clearly outplayed the visitors, advancing the oval 234 yards to the Jayhawk's seventeen, and negotiating sixteen first downs to the opponent's none. The first score came as a result of a touchback and the three touchdowns were made by Howarth and Swanson, the latter going over twice.

Camp Dodge for Northwestern

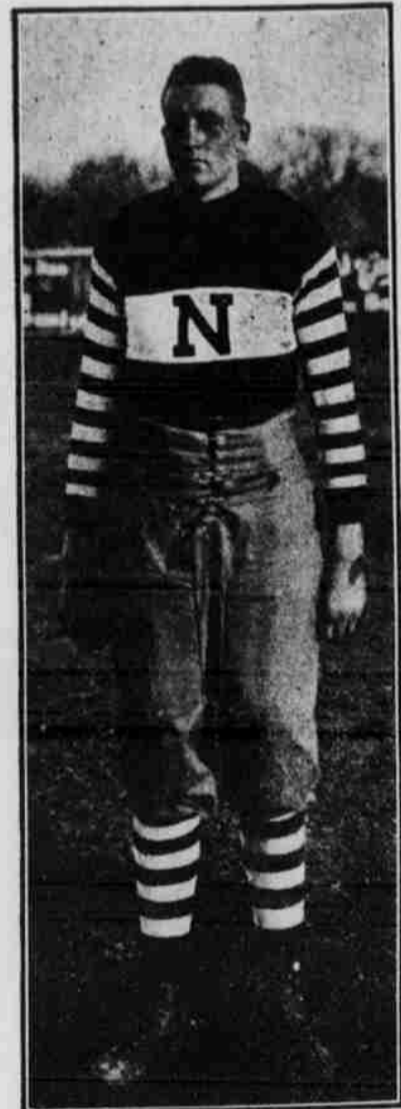

Professor Scott cancelled the game with Northwestern for November 23 because of unsatisfactory financial arrangements and the Camp Dodge Soldiers were secured to substitute.

Nebraska lacked the necessary punch to advance the ball in a crisis and they were defeated 23 to 7. One Dodge score was a pure fluke and the other two were results of 45 and 62 yard runs by Halfback Caughlin.

The Huskers played rings around the Dodgers but weakened in the third quarter long enough for the visitors to pile up seventeen points.

Post-season Games

The Huskers journey to St. Louis to take on Dick Rutherford's Washington university pupils December 7, and another game probably with Camp Funston, Illinois or the Kansas Aggie.
