UNIVERSITY AIDS IN GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN

It will probably be necessary to lay a state levy of one mill to raise the required $3,000,000.

The only cloud in the horizon of improved road conditions for this state is the shortage of contractors. They are perhaps even more difficult to obtain than the material itself. Another factor is the great amount of paving which will be done in towns ranging from 1,500 people upwards, because the war has compelled these towns to wait until its termination for civic improvements. If the legislature agree to accept the proposition of the national government, a large part of this money will be used to grade and resurface the already large number of public highways in Nebraska.

ROAD INSTITUTE OPENS AT UNIVERSITY TODAY

Nebraska Good Roads Association, will respond. Governor S. R. McKelvie will speak on "Good Roads Program for Nebraska" following the talk by Mr. Wolz. A paper will next be read by Robert Harvey, state surveyor, on "The Location and Surveys Along Section Lines and Preservation of Corners of Land Surveys." A discussion will follow in which Paul E. Brown of Gordon, George H. Overing of Red Cloud, Robert H. Willis of Bridgeport and R. O. Green of Culbertson will participate.

This evening Mr. Paul E. Brown, surveyor and engineer, will give an illustrated paper on "Sandhill Roads." This will be followed by an interesting discussion led by Professor George P. Chatburn of the engineering department at the university.

CONSTITUTION OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

On the eve of his temporary return to the United States within a month after the formal opening of the peace conference, President Wilson had the satisfaction of reading before a plenary session the draft of the constitution of the League of Nations, of which he has been the most conspicuous framer. Limits of space at the moment preclude more than a general reference to the provisions of this document. Under it the action of the signatories is to be effected through meetings at stated intervals of a body of delegates representing all of them and more frequent meetings of an executive council, consisting of representatives of the United States, the British Empire, France, Italy and Japan, together with representatives of four other states chosen by the body of delegates. The council is to meet as occasion may require, but at least once a year. The first meeting of the delegates and of the council is to be called by the president of the United States. Admission to the league of states other than signatories or named in a protocol as states to be invited to adhere to the constitution is limited to fully self-governing countries, including dominions and colonies, and requires the assent of two-thirds of the body of delegates. No state is to be admitted unless it is able to give effective guarantees of its sincere intention to observe its international obligations. The signatories not only undertake to respect and to preserve against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all states members of the league, but any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting them or not, is declared a matter of concern to the league, the members of which reserve the right to take any action necessary to safeguard the peace of nations. Where disputes arise between members which cannot be adjusted by the ordinary processes of diplomacy, they agree not to resort to war without previously submitting the questions involved to arbitration or to inquiry by the executive council, nor until three months after an award, and not even then against a member complying with the award. Provision is also made for efforts to settle disputes between states which are members of the league and non-members, or between states neither of which is a member, and for the establishment of a permanent court of international justice.

Self-respect will do to begin with, but self-abnegation is the only consummate virtue.—Round Table.

Omaha
A Grain-Distributing Center

OMAHA directly distributes grain to every part of the United States, as well as a large volume for export. Almost a quarter of the grain shipped into Omaha annually is sold to foreign countries.

This big market means much to the farmers of the surrounding territory. Transportation facilities into Omaha are such that grain reaches the market quickly and the cash returns to the shipper are quick. The turn-over is greater. All these items tend to put more dollars in the farmer's pocket than would be the case if there were not a leading grain market in Omaha.
