DAILY DIARY RHYMES
"THE DEAN'S FORMAL"
 The town philosopher stretched his legs
 And spat in the scuttle of coal;
 While the Patriarchs of the Grocery store
 Crawled out of their winter's hole,
 Yawning a bit as they perked their ears
 And winked at the light of day.
 For when the Philosopher shifted a bit
 It was proof he had something to say.
 "My friends, there came this morning
 Thru the good hands of the mail
 A few penned words from that son of mine
 And thereby hangs a tale;
 He writes that in addition to all
 The honors he has grabbed
 This last one crowns him Queen O' the May
 With an honor that's seldom grabbed.
 Each year the Dean, the Executive Dean,
 For the sake of a very few
 Holds formal proceedings in party form,
 While the cast each year is new.
 He writes that the Dean then praises them
 For the part they've played as a rule
 And says they may quit for the rest of the year,
 That their learning's ahead of the school.
 My friends, my son was one of these few
 And I'm proud of the stand he's made.
 I am glad to say that he's made the best
 Of his life and his father's aid;
 So tomorrow night on the midnight train
 We'll wait for the clang of the bell
 And greet the boy with an outstretched palm.
 For he's done his duty well.
