quainted with the campus and the city enough to prefer other things. There are many things freshmen should be told about the University the first week, and the daily gatherings are a splendid idea.

Concerning a Kansan's Opinion of Dr. Minakuchi's Address

Editor Daily Kansan:—

Again we have the platform speaker who persists in offering as proofs of a premise arguments which could not be supported in debate. Some time ago D. Minakuchi, speaking before the convocation made statement after statement which was either untrue or presented in a false light. "Japan has no fear of a break between the United States and Japan," he said, and later "America is Japan's greatest creditor, as well as her greatest customer." And this is advanced as a reason why Japan and the United States will never engage in a war! Both of these arguments are exactly the same as the ones offered by Germans in England, and even by misguided Englishmen, in 1912-13, and the earlier part of 1914 to show the impossibility of war between Germany and England.

Dr. Minakuchi further stated that Japan had never violated international obligations, attributing her Chinese and Korean policies to "mistakes of the past." This, considering the continued aggressions against these countries in the past eight years, and the recent annexation of Korea, with the overthrow of an established, independent government, is ludicrous.

The Speaker's arguments with reference to the Philippines were equally unconvincing. First, with reference to the tropical location, the fact that no great nation has ever come from a tropical climate, is irrelevant in as much as Japan would only desire the islands as a colony, as is her case with the United States—and certainly their location has not caused this country to cease to be a great one! Again, it is well known that the mongolian race is the only one which has in the past been able to exist in any climate—they are found from the poles to the equator. The economic argument is also fallacious, for although the islands have cost this country a great deal in the past, they have now been educated nearly, if not quite, to the point of self-support. And finally, the gentleman's agreement between Japan and the United States is certainly of no more value than "the scraps of paper" of Germany, particularly in view of the recent treaties between Japan and China which have been so ruthlessly broken by the former.

The "Yellow journalism" plea was obviously a more or less innocent attempt to discredit the officially verified reports of the acquisition of Mexican land by Japanese citizens.

Considering these facts, embracing the denial of nearly every portion of Dr. Minakuchi's speech, it will certainly be wise, to use one portion of his own expressions, "Chew the material well before you swallow it," lest you should "have a bad case of indigestion."
