DAILY DIARY RHYMES
By
Gayle Vincent Grubb

"The Society Hel-loooooo."

Have you ever been wendin' your way down the street Clean plumb full of joy from your head to your feet
When the sun's twice as bright as it really should be
With as balmy an air as a breath
from the sea
And been knocked as cold as a blanket
of snow
By havin' some dame gurgle out a
"Hel-loooooo?"

Society, friends, is a presumption mess
For it preaches you manner, your language and dress,
And the sweet little girl that at one time was shy
Yet spoke like she meant it, on passn'
her by
Has now learned the cord of this word to a note
That sounds like the tonsils were chokin' the throat.

My hand to the woman that few of us meet
Who gives you the glad wave a block up the street Or who gives you a Hello head-first from the heart
And gives to the world just an out-and-out part Of a woman who's looked at society's laws
And picked out the horde of defections and flaws.

Like a fellow told me: "Do you know how I feel
When I hear people talk like the squak of an eel?
I long for the days of the farm somehow
With no soul about but the old brindle
cow
And to bury myself in a hay mow of hay."
I pass, for that leaves me with nothing to say.
