NEEDED A REMEDY

Will Nebraska have the punch to beat Ames next Saturday? That is a question which is puzzling students, rooters, alumni and all followers of Cornhusker sport; even the coach and the team.

Certain it is, that if Nebraska is to win, the team must work and must employ snappier plays than used in previous games. In every game played this season the Cornhusker scoring punch has been lacking. The material seemed to be there, the team apparently was in fine trim for battle, but it lacked the stamina to put the ball across at the critical time. In this respect, every game has been a failure. Nebraska has been playing strong teams, it is true, but in every game this season one team has been within scoring distance of the goal line only to fail in the crucial test of putting the ball over. A diagnosis of conditions is needed as well as a remedy to offset the indifference of the team.

Failure to beat Ames by a decisive score will be a stinging reproach to Cornhusker football and a keen disappointment to students and alumni.

A WHY OF VICTORY

There is a "why" of victory of which the student body is not generally aware. It is a spiritual essence which is deeper and more fundamental than the physique and brain which won the game last Saturday.

Every night when the long hours of practice are over, when the rubber has done its bit and the team members make their hungry descent upon the training table at the Commons, this significant "why" of victory crops out above the matter-of-fact exterior of the thirty youths on the Varsity squad.

Hungry and tired, they wait until all are assembled and before the meal every man of them stands to sing the first stanza of the "Alma Mater." It is their prayer breathed for the success of Washington by men not too stalwart to pray and not too timid to get out and do Gargantuan service to back up their prayer.

Think about it. Try to emulate that sort of spirit. Try to bring yourself to that mental state. It is a little thing, but it is one of the "whys" of victory.—Student Life.

IMPORTANCE OF THE HONOR SYSTEM

The University of Illinois is operating under the honor system by the consent of the Council of Administration and at the request of the entire student body as expressed in a public election last spring. The undergraduate has done his share in establishing the system and in keeping it on a working basis. The entire responsibility of examinations has been shifted to the student body and the way in which the student body has accepted it is gratifying to all believers in the integrity of the men and women at Illinois.

But if the student takes the responsibility of acting on his honor it is also the duty of the instructor to assist as much as he possibly can in making the honor system experiment an unqualified success. If the student has the right to take examinations under the honor system it is the duty of the instructor to see that examinations are conducted under that plan. All of the faculty, however, have not fallen in line with the policy as established last spring. Some have remained in the room,—perhaps unthinkingly, but nevertheless violating the spirit of the plan. One has gone so far as to announce that his classes would not be conducted under the honor system. Such an intolerant attitude on the part of an instructor will crush out of the student whatever good intentions and friendly feelings he may have toward that instructor. It will breed contempt for an institution that establishes a system and then refuses to live up to it. It makes the honor system a joke and the granting of it a mere pretext.

The action on the part of one instructor casts a shadow over all the good points of the system; the intolerance of one man creates an impression among new students at the University. The honor system has been given to us and it is our right to demand that classes be conducted under that plan, whether the instructor is in favor of it or not. If we are going to succeed with the system, it is the duty of the whole University to get together and work toward the same end.—The Daily Illini.

AMERICA DOES NOT KNOW ITS NEIGHBORS

fact and few prejudices, and had no idea whatever of reforming the Argentinos or of featuring the wonderful wealth and superiority of the United States. This is the type of man we have got to educate if we are going to be successful in the competition for South American business.

German Advantage
The Germans have had a great superiority due to their thorough education, linguistic abilities, and because they identify themselves with inhabitants of foreign countries in a way that we Americans do not and will not for some time. Usually an American goes to South America to get all he can out of that country in a short time. He rarely marries among the people as the Germans do, and very seldom becomes identified with the communities permanently. This puts us under some disadvantage.

The letter from which these quotations have been selected was written in response to queries made by men in the higher offices of the University who are interested in educating young men for service in the Latin countries to our south, either for diplomatic or commercial work. It is the intention of university authorities to put in branches of work which will meet the requirements for such vocations and steps are now being taken to find just what kind of training will be most essential for such service. There are a number of instructors in the different colleges who are fully competent to give training in many of the lines of work which have already been found necessary for the student who desires to take up his life work in South American countries.
