Nebraska is seven points behind her opponents in the total number of scores amassed this season. The Cornhuskers have chalked up fifty-three marks while the teams they have played have scored sixty points. A touchdown and a goal kick would place Nebraska and her competitors on an even basis as far as points are concerned. That is, one touchdown and one goal kick more than Syracuse gets. Why wouldn't next Thursday be a good time to even up the score?

The action of members of the football team and the "N" club in disapproving the wearing of the Nebraska letter by students other than athletes is entirely justified. The "N" is the official recognition by the university of a student's superiority in athletics and the wearing of the letter should be limited to men and women who have taken a leading part in some sport. A movement started several years ago toward letters to debaters and students prominent in other collegiate activities met with popular disapproval and was promptly suppressed. The "N" is rightly an athletic emblem and its rights should be respected.

PLAYING A GAME

Are you playing College? Are you spending four profitless years in the university in the game of chasing credits? Do you pick out credits and then go after them with the sole purpose of speeding up the total to 120?

It is easy for the average student to brush up an acquaintance with the different groups that will give him 120 hours and an A. B. But 120 hours of passing grades are only the standard by which other people, who do not know you, judge your work, your mental ability. As grades they may get you a job, but they will not hold it. Unrelated to your thinking machine they will have no more influence on how you carry yourself in that job than what you ate for dinner.

The person who gets the most of his college is he who comes for the primary purpose of building a natural groundwork of knowledge. He becomes so interested in his search for facts that the credits follow as naturally as a strong constitution follows proper bodily exercise. He who enrolls in the university for the larger purpose of finding life through wisdom needs never worry about credits.

As a game College is a lifeless affair with less punch than a checker battle between the two town loafers in the small town barber shop. The student who flits from one group to another adding to his total score until he reaches 120 may have entered the King row but he will never win a victory.—Daily Kansan.

GET OUT OF THE RUT

Students of Ohio State often bitterly criticize themselves. They think that their lives are narrowed and that their energies are centered in one field—that of pure academic education. These members of the University are decidedly wrong in thinking themselves "getting into a rut" in the everyday grind and trend of campus affairs. It is possible for every student to widen the range of his University life and make it less monotonous, less self-interested and less meaningless.

College life that confines itself to the mere devotion to printed pages and to the struggle to attain the highest marks of recognition is not the commendable nor desirable type of existence for the university student. It is true that after a short while of it the student becomes senseless to outside activities and life gravitates about a narrow and deadened center. His life does not hold the enthusiasm, cannot embrace the liveliness and joys that encourage and enrich student life.—Ohio State Lantern.

PHI PHI GIRL IS HERE TODAY AS ACTRESS

Susie Scott, of Kearney, Nebr., Playing in "Twin Beds" at Orpheum Theater

Nebraska University students have more than their usual interest in Tuesday's attraction at the Orpheum theater, not merely because it is the annual laugh festival "Twin Beds," but because a prominent member of the presenting cast is a former varsity sorority girl—Miss Susie Scott, of Kearney, Nebr., and many theater parties have been organized to pay her homage both this afternoon and this evening.

Miss Scott was a student here for three years, and a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. She took a leading interest in university dramatic affairs and was a general favorite with the student body. Her stage talent was so pronounced in the various plays in which she took part here that her friends urged her to take up the theater as a profession. She has done so, and with marked success. She is not a famous star—yet, but she has more than made good and theatrical producers predict an exceptional future for her, so it may not be long before she is promoted to stardom and her name appears in the incandescents on Broadway.

In "Twin Beds," Miss Scott plays the part of Amanda Davis.

Miss Alice Howell, of the chair of dramatic instruction, will be hostess at a large theater party at the Orpheum theater this evening and various other groups of the student body will attend the play to see and applaud their erstwhile fellow worker of the class room. Incidentally, Miss Scott will be much entertained during her brief stay here, so she will undoubtedly put in her record busy day. A large delegation is coming up from Kearney to add their mite to the general tribute.

NATIONAL CONVENTION WILL BE REPORTED AT

Mr. Frank O'Connell, state secretary of the American Legion will read an interesting report of the national convention which was held in Minneapolis, November 10-12, in the Temple theater at 8:00 o'clock Monday evening, November 24.

This report promises to make the meeting interesting and every member of the University of Nebraska Post of the American Legion of Honor is invited to listen to Mr. O'Connell. The resolution committee will report at the meeting.

All men who are members of the Legion at the University and who have not received buttons recognizing the fact, may get them at the meeting Monday night, when they will be distributed.

An invitation is extended to all ex-service men, both members of the Legion and those who have not joined to be present. The meeting will be concluded by 9 o'clock.
