

HUNDREDS OF STUDENTS OFFER TO HELP RELIEVE COAL FAMINE

Mass Meeting Tuesday Brings Pledges of Students Who Freely Volunteer for Work in Mines

Three Co-eds Declare They Will Go and Help Cook for Nebraskans Working to Produce Badly-needed Fuel—Register at Students' Activities Office

Nearly fifteen hundred students, both men and women, attended the mass meeting held at convocation hour in Memorial hall, Tuesday morning and pledged support to the government in the present fuel crisis. At least two hundred students expressed their willingness and intention to serve in the mines in neighboring states furnishing Nebraska with fuel, if needed, and with the large number registering later in the day, the total by evening, it is thought, will well pass the four hundred mark.

Resolutions were adopted at the meeting condemning those responsible for conditions as they are at present, and the moral support of the university was pledged to the government. It was made clear that while the students, in no way, desire to oppose either the operators of the mines or the miners, yet the seriousness of the present situation demands immediate action if great suffering and perhaps death among the people of the country is to be prevented.

Leonard Kline, who initiated the plan of organizing the student body for this emergency, presided at the meeting. In introducing the first speaker he declared "We have the opportunity to be among the first in the state to volunteer for work in the coal mines." He then pointed out that volunteers would be sent out only if needed.

Governor McKelvie was the first speaker. In beginning his speech he declared that "These are days for action, not words," and with direct earnestness he outlined briefly the situation and showed its gravity. He was greatly pleased with the spirit and enthusiasm shown, and the loyal support of the university as was evidenced. "This is an expression of moral support of the school that will be felt throughout our entire country," he concluded.

Chancellor Avery was next to address the students. In a brief way he suggested an organization that would care completely for a Nebraska unit of miners as was contemplated. In addition to the suggestion of food, shelter, and medical care he said that he thought it would be possible to send faculty members from the different colleges to assist any of the men who might, after their regular hours of work in the mines, care to continue their work. "Every possible effort would be made," he said "to assist these men upon their return to school." Free tutors and an opportunity to make up everything missed could, he thought, make it possible for every man who did this work, to complete his studies by the end of next year.

Harold Gerhart, president of the innocents expressed the opinion that the present condition offered an excellent opportunity for the students of the university to be of service to the people of the state, and he urged support of the movement.

Chris Christensen, president of the Student Council, and also representing the school as a student speaker, made it clear that the people of the state who had made the University of Nebraska possible were in danger of suffering, and stated this as a reason he was willing to enter the service if needed.

Luther Cobby, president of the university post of the American Legion of World War Veterans spoke strongly of the need, and declared he himself ready to go when needed. He declared that undoubtedly ex-service men would go into the present situation as willingly as they volunteered for war service.

Following the addresses students were given the opportunity of signing the blanks furnished as a declaration that they would go when needed. Nellie Sparks, who spent nineteen months overseas cooking for American soldiers volunteered to go to the coal fields and help cook for the men in case they were called. Jeanne A. Kistner and Elyth Burton also offered their services to help. No appeal was made or has been made for girls to help out, but the spirit shown has been declared commendable.

ANNUAL CORNHUSKER GIRLS' PARTY HAS BEEN POSTPONED

The Girls' Annual Cornhusker party, scheduled for next Friday night, has been postponed in accordance with the university's program to conserve fuel.

This party is one of the big events of the school year for the girls. The committee in charge states that the present emergency will not cause the party to be given up. It will probably be held after Christmas.

Plans have already been made for a gala time Friday evening. Girls have been preparing varied costumes, and their organizations have planned stunts. These will be in order later in the school year, we are assured.

FREDA MEYER TELLS OF WASHINGTON TRIP AT VESPERS TODAY

Miss Freda Myer, a working girl of Lincoln, who was a delegate to the National Y. W. C. A. Industrial Conference and to the Women's International Industrial Conference, both of which met at Washington, D. C., last October, told of her experiences, at vespers Tuesday evening. She heard through representatives of thirty states of the United States, through women workers of Belgium, of Italy, of Japan, through women from every part of the globe what the working women of the world are thinking and doing.

Jane Adams, Julia Lanthrop, Secretary Baker and Mrs. Raymond Robins, president of the Women's Trade Union League were a few of the speakers.

Mrs. Robins, in her welcome address, said: "We are gathered here to the first international congress of working women. There will be many another. We are the pioneers and pioneers are those men and women who look into the future with faith and hope and courage and the certainty that life summons to a great advantage. We will go and find the hidden treasure of fellowship and understanding; we will go and find the power of the spirit, which cannot be shaken."

"Long hours, low wages, and unsanitary conditions are the problems which women from all parts of the world were trying to solve. Personality, brotherhood and service is the solution offered by the church as represented there. At present, trade unions are the best solution."

It was generally agreed that the immediate task was to interest the women of the country in the industrial problems. This, Miss Myer stated, was her purpose in coming before the girls of the university.

Miss Myer was one of the six delegates who were elected to represent the north central district at the national Y. W. C. A. Industrial Conference, which met during the first part of October. The International Women's Industrial Conference called by the Women's Trade Union League invited those delegates to attend as official guests when it convened October 23.

While in Washington Miss Myer met the daughter of President Wilson and the wives of all the cabinet members.

LEGION OPPOSES RED ACTIVITIES

Resolutions Unanimously Adopted Favoring Vigorous Action Against Revolutionary Movements

Members Offer Services Unreservedly to Aid in Relief of Coal Shortage

Opposition to all movements against the government of the United States was keenly voiced in the meeting of the University Post of the American Legion Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Faculty Room of the Temple, when the following resolutions were unanimously adopted by the members present with only a few minor amendments and changes of structure affecting interpretation:

"Nebraska University Post of the American Legion, Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 2, 1919.

"The following resolutions are unanimously adopted by the post:

"Whereas: There are within our boundaries conditions entirely foreign to the principles and teachings of our forefathers and for which we and our comrades offered ourselves in the service of our country, and

"Whereas: We believe that these conditions are largely due to the activities of aliens and other undesirable citizens within the country, and are particularly evidenced by the dastardly attack by I. W. W. members upon our comrades-in-arms at Centralia, Washington, on November 11, 1919; and whereas, this and similar out-breaks are symptoms of a disease (Continued on Page Four.)

Dean LeRossignol Declares Volunteers Will Break Strike

Government Cannot Force Miners to Work But Protects Others Offering Services

"I am confident that, as a last resort, the only means of breaking a strike which has already firmly established itself, is the ready volunteering of the citizens to carry on the work thus hampered by the walk-out," declared Dean J. E. Le Rossignol of the College of Business Administration who has made an extensive study of this subject.

Dean Le Rossignol has written many articles which have been printed in various economic journals and magazines emphasizing the truth of this statement.

Volunteering breaks a strike. In the general strike which swept the entire country of Sweden in 1909 a volunteer brigade of teachers, students, merchants, and everyone interested in the welfare of their country formed a mighty army against the striking laborers and forced industry back on a firm basis again.

The point has been raised by a number of students that volunteer workers in the coal mines will create the enmity of the strikers and the "scabs" or strike-breakers will have the strikers themselves to contend with. This condition will be relieved, however, by the fact that federal troops will be on hand at every moment to guard the volunteer workers.

Dean Le Rossignol wrote an article on the strike of the wharf-laborers of New Zealand in 1913, which was published in the American Economic Review. This strike was also broken by volunteers, especially farmers. The strike occurred at the time when they were exporting dairy produce. Some of the volunteers acted as laborers, and some as special policemen to maintain order. Many seamen also took part in this strike, and the farmers and even the clergymen of New Zealand were compelled to man the ships until the conditions were relieved.

TWENTY-FIVE HUSKER VETERANS PREPARE FOR STIFF SCHEDULE

Nebraska Will Meet Representative Schools in Every Section, From Indiana to the Rockies

One Thousand Student Season Tickets Must Be Sold to Finance the Greatest Season in Cornhusker Basketball History

DIRECTORIES ARE NOT ENTIRELY DISPOSED OF

University directories are still available at the university Y. M. C. A. office in the Temple. To supply the increased demand this year several hundred more books were ordered than last year and are still on hand.

The books sell for forty cents, this price being just barely sufficient to defray the cost of its publication. They contain in a handy form the names, addresses, affiliations, and phone numbers of all students besides organization lists, professors and instructors.

Alfred Hintz, manager of this year's directory intends to have all the books disposed of by Friday night. During the day Friday they will be on sale at various places on the campus.

WRESTLERS TO BEGIN MAT WORK MONDAY

Regular Class to Commence Work Today—Varsity Grappler Team Will Be Chosen Later

Men for the wrestling team will meet at the Chapel floor ready for work Wednesday afternoon 3:40 according to Dr. Clapp. The men will meet three times a week and one hour's credit will be given for this work. Besides the exercise and credit there is a good chance to make the wrestling team.

The wrestlers will probably face the same sort of a schedule that was customarily contracted in pre-war days. At least two large events are expected to be staged, one here during the State High School Basketball tournament with some team from the Chicago conference, and one away from home. In addition to this it is the desire of the athletic department to send the team to the Western Intercollegiate Wrestling and Fencing Association meeting which will probably be held at the University of Illinois.

Among the Nebraska grapplers will be found one of the cleverest men among amateur demons of the mat. Harry Troendly, who was last year captain of the team, is accorded the honor of being one of the fastest, cleverest and gamest men that the school has ever had in this branch of sports. Troendly is back this year with the same old spirit and will go in the 125-135 pound class. In the material which is expected to come out for honors there are quite a number of last-year men. Salter, who showed up well last season will be back on the mat, as will Bates, Wertz and several others.

In the 135 pound class will probably be Salter, from last year; in the 145 pound, Wertz. A number of men will be looked for in the 158 pounder, and it is hoped that among those who turn out will be R. M. and A. E. Sandstedt, D. Slater, Zook, Bates, Brock, Stewart and others. The 175 pound class will have a number of well known grapplers, including Perry, Pickwell, Hoyt, Baskin, Wade, Munn, Zollars, and Dobson.

A trio of heavyweights, who are hard fighters and clever men of the mat are to be found in Monte Munn, Pucelik and Dale.

With the material available and the schedule arranged the school faces the prospects of a favorable season. Some class bouts will be staged and keen competition for places on the team is expected.

UNIVERSITY PLAYERS POSTPONE PRODUCTION PLAY "UNDER COVER"

"Under Cover" has been postponed until further notice. This indefinite postponement of the next feature of the University Players is one of the many methods of coal conservation adopted by the university. The production was to have been given the 13th, 14th, and 15th of December. It is probable that it will be given after the Christmas recess if the coal situation has been relieved by that time. The rehearsals, which have been held nearly every night, have been discontinued except when the caste can assemble during the day time for work.

Basketball has started with a rush at Nebraska. Twenty-five candidates are prancing about the gymnasium every afternoon, clad in the new scarlet practice jerseys. The greatest turnout of basket tossers in the history of the Cornhusker school greeted Coach Schissler at the initial practice. Every man is a seasoned veteran and competition for the Varsity five will be very keen. The task of picking a team out of the Husker squad will require a great deal of skill on the part of the coaching staff.

A fitting schedule has been prepared for this star array of basketball artists. The strongest teams in the western and middle states will clash with the Huskers this year on the floor. Notre Dame, Indiana, Valparaiso, South Dakota, Colorado College, Colorado University—these are some of the teams that the Cornhusker quintette will meet. It will cost $4,000 to finance this heavy schedule. This is an unheard of amount to pay for a Nebraska basketball schedule, but Coach Schissler is counting on the loyalty of the students of Nebraska to put the schedule across, and the prowess of his athletes to gather the victories.

Season tickets will be placed on sale sometime in the near future and students will be given a chance to see the fourteen games to be played on the home floor for the modest sum of three dollars. The athletic authorities believe that if one thousand of these season tickets can be sold, the schedule will pay out and the season will be a success financially. The Board of Regents have authorized the playing of the schedule but are relying on the backing of the Husker students to make it a paying proposition.

The best of equipment has been obtained for the Varsity squad. Brand new practice outfits are now in use and the speedy Huskers present a nifty appearance on the floor. New playing uniforms have been ordered and will arrive shortly. When the Nebraskans appear on the floor against Morningside December 19, they will wear the latest word in basketball equipment. White jerseys with a scarlet "Nebraska" across the bosom, scarlet stripes down the seams of the white trousers, and scarlet belts will make the Huskers' adornment complete. Schissler believes in starting the season with the best of equipment.

A Frenchman owned an old horse that was the worse for wear, besides being half starved to death. Taking a neighbor into the stable one day to show him the condition of the horse for the purpose of getting his advice on what he should do with him, he found the horse dead. He looked at the horse and then he looked at the neighbor and remarked: "Funny thing about dat horse; he never did dat before."
