Because The Daily Nebraskan wishes to serve the students of the university in the best possible manner and to cause no inconvenience to subscribers, the paper has resumed issuance after having suspended publication a week during the fuel shortage restrictions. The paper will continue to be published throughout the week in spite of adverse conditions. No heat at any time and no light after six o'clock in the office are no slight disadvantages in cold weather. The staff and the reporters however are making all efforts to carry out the policy of the paper to print all the news when it is news, and we are pleased to announce that, in spite of revised schedules, The Daily Nebraskan will continue to be at the daily service of subscribers.

CAMPUS BOLSHEVISM

Propaganda for the purpose of arousing sentiment in favor of closing the university appeared on the campus last week in the shape of handbills which stated that, although the people of the state were suffering and business was paralyzed from lack of coal, Lincoln merchants, "to satisfy their own gluttinous greed for the almighty dollar," are denying coal to essential industries and forcing the students to remain in school. The word gluttinous we print as it appeared on the bills.

The propagandaists did not confine their efforts to the campus; one of the city newspapers published a story which told of the printing of the bills as a result of a mass meeting of students, at which resolutions were passed condemning the action of the board of regents in not closing school. The story was so presented that it appeared that the meeting was attended by a large number of students and was expressive of the sentiment of a majority of the students. Investigation has shown the whole thing to have been the work of a mere handful of students.

The affair savors of bolshevism, not to say anarchy. These regents have the best interests of the university at heart, and came to their decision only after a careful consideration of the matter. Does the university community not resent the action of a dozen students who would make it appear that the students in general are rebelling against the decision rendered by the governing board of the university?

We believe that the students of the university do not stand behind the action taken by a few agitators, and that they wish to make no such indictment against the board of regents and the merchants of Lincoln.

SHELVING YOUR IDEALS

This thing of doing as the Romans do may always be carried too far. Individuality is supremacy, because it implies that you are because you have a right to be. It means that you possess a thing rare, unusual, and valuable that every one in the world does not possess.

So much argument is advanced to the effect that university people should adapt themselves to conditions as they find them, that a great misunderstanding may accrue as to just what this adaption means. It means getting acquainted with many personalities so that you may choose and follow in the foot-steps of those whom you most emulate. It does not mean submergence to everyone's particular whim, because the man who could satisfy all opinions or policies would be peculiar, and not much good in the long run. Adaption rather means locating your group and standing by those ideals which through association or training you deem most valuable.

At hand we have a suggestion that contains a vivid truth, "Many men and women enter college with high ideals. Some of these they lose sight of—at least temporarily—because of a conflict with pleasure or something else that would appear to pay better dividends." False ideals are the only ones that should be extinguished. Why shelve those attributes of character which the university will help mold a sane form of expression? Without any ideals at all a person is practically a nonentity. Not standing for anything he might just as well cease to stand.

Ideals cannot be put upon a reserved shelf. They cannot be hunted up to suit a particular occasion. They either live or they are soon destroyed entirely through the process of decay.—Michigan Daily.

STUDENT OPINION

An Appeal to the Student Body

To the Editor of the Daily Nebraskan: A large number of handbills have been promiscuously scattered and placed about the city and campus of the university. The aim of these handbills is to influence the public opinion in such a way so as to cause the closing of the university. They are outspoken in their estimate of their doubt of the character of the business men of the city as well as of members of the Board of Regents. As a member of the student body and one interested in this large university, I believe that a reply to that handbill should be made in justice to myself, to other students who feel as I do, and to correct any possible mistake that the public may take of the opinions of the body of university students.

To begin then, who got up and caused to be distributed, these handbills? The handbills give no clue. They are anonymous and one should always be slow in reading and believing work of this nature. Then too what will be the probable result of the handbills? The chances of the university being closed, because of the effect on the morale of the student as he continues his studies and here is where the greatest harm comes in. Because of this, the effect of the handbills is larger than might be supposed.

From the contents of the bills themselves one is led to believe that the continuation of the classes will be a source of suffering to outside interests while giving no benefits to the students obtaining the grantees privilege of warm rooms. Does the author of the bills realize why we have a university, why men and women are in it from all parts of this state, all states of the union, and from nations of the globe? Do they realize that these students have come here not for pleasure but for work? Do they realize that of the men and women turned out by this university, that they are going out, not to gain riches or glory, but to serve society and be the servants of the people? A great man has said "Of the students graduating from colleges, one-third are never heard from, one-third go to the devil, and one-third rule the world." For the sake of the one-third who shall be rulers, let us avoid any mentioning of cessation of studies.

In the present epoch in which we live, during the continual unrest of society due to the new conditions in which the society of the world finds itself, such outbreaks from the ranks of the student body to wave the red flag, are lamentable. When the government of this organized society is trying to secure return to stable and normal conditions, when organizations of any description find it hard to preserve favorable conditions, we should all do our best to do our bit to help. And this cannot be done when a minority of a class make a demonstration as has happened.

The reflection which the import of the handbills lays on the inability of the school authorities to know how to handle the present situation in a just manner is deplorable. To those who are here to study and learn, to those who believe in organization and a square deal, I make the appeal of reason. Let us remember that Abraham Lincoln could not stretch his legs over a radiator nor could he turn in to bed simply because he didn't have any juice on the electric switch. We are inconvenienced as to physical comfort, but this will be adjusted and we are not inconvenienced as to our search for knowledge.

Let the good work go on!

"I save two to two and one-half hours daily on a 22-mile milk route with Goodyear Cord Pneumatic Truck Tires and find milk travels in better condition than in my solid-tired trucks. Three teams would be required to do the same work done by the pneumatic-tired truck."—Frank Leibel, Farmer, Newbrighton, Minn.

MANY farmers, like the one quoted above, know that a pneumatic-tired truck saves much time, drudgery and expense.

They know that this is a very valuable saving in these days of high labor costs and when markets must be reached more promptly than ever.

For pneumatic tires free a motor truck from the handicaps imposed by solid tires; they give it utmost traction and cushioning for all-round utility.

Rural users of Goodyear Cord Pneumatic Truck Tires load in the fields, reduce market hauls by hours and get top prices for perishables and livestock, sometimes injured by slower, harder transport.

By helping other power-driven farm machinery to work to capacity, Goodyear-Cord-equipped trucks enable farmers to secure the full benefit of motorization.

While pioneering the development of pneumatic truck tires Goodyear has widely investigated the benefits secured by farmers employing them as above.

Consequently, further information concerning the use of pneumatic-tired trucks on farms may be obtained from The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, at Akron, Ohio.
