PERSONALS

Dr. F. D. Barker will give the course in zoology in the summer school at the state university. He is planning to include a course which will be an introduction to heredity particularly for students in sociology and some advanced work in medical zoology and research in parasitology.

Prof. D. D. Whitney of the zoological department at the state university will teach in the summer school of the University of Missouri. He will there give a general course in his subject and some advanced work in genetics and evolution.

Romulo Teodolo Soldevilla, who holds two degrees from the University of Nebraska, having received the M. A. last spring in jurisprudence, public law and political science, expects to return to the Philippine Islands in April. He has been in the states for five years attending the University of Nebraska and before that he was in California and Colorado. During all this time he has earned his way completely. He will stop in Washington before sailing to interview representatives of the Philippines as he is eager to get into government service.

DRIVE NOW ON FOR "RAG" SUBSCRIPTIONS

small reason why this semester's list should not be even larger. The Nebraskan needs the support of each student on the campus, and a ready response to the question "Have you subscribed for your Nebraskan?" is the request issued to the students at this time. If each student who will register tomorrow, and Saturday will make it a point to take with him to the armory an extra $1.25 he will feel well repaid during the next term, when he may exercise the privilege of getting his "Rag" each morning.

Fraternities are urged to bring up the matter of Nebraska subscriptions at their next meeting, and to ask each member to take out his subscription for next semester. Subscription books have been asked for in a large number of fraternity houses, and already two Greek letter societies report that Nebraskan subscriptions for the second school term.

Because of obvious reasons, the student publication board has favored the paper's return to a five-column make-up, and from now on until further notice, the publication will follow out this old rule which has been revived again after a semester's trial of the six-column basis plan.

OH! TO BE A STUDENT By Jessie Watson

(Apologies to Robert Browning)

Oh! to be a student, now that 'xams are here,
For whoever goes to Uni sees some morning unaware
That the dullest cad or the smartest guy
On the campus here has his face awry,
For the question makes the poor lad tear hair
In his despair.

And after writing, when grades follow,
And the F's and C's and all so low!
Hark! when the student seeing the teacher turn
Leans to his neighbor and copies o'er his shoulder

Idioms and phrases that he could not learn.

That's a good joke, the neighbor his crib had forgotten
And had the whole thing wrong from "me voici" to
"La fille" meaning "lassie."

Though the books are red with failure marks,
All will be right for students who were sharks
And studied day and night the whole year through
So cram some more, my lad, and don't be blue.

People no longer humbly ask for things. They demand them.—Atchison Globe.

Your neighbors know more about you than you think they do.—Atchison Globe.

Never Before

Never before have the opportunities been so great or the salaries so liberal for qualified commercial help as at present. Business is earnestly pleading for more young men and women prepared to share the responsibilities and profits of the day.
