SECOND GAME

VALPARAISO, Ind., Feb. 28.—Nebraska made a clean sweep of her tour through the east by her fifth victory here this afternoon when she swept the Valparaiso team off the floor with a score of 35 to 20. After winning most of her games this season the Hoosiers met their Waterloo at the hands of the speedy westerners.

The visitors led from the start and shot baskets from all angles. Their floor play was wonderful and they cut their way into a ten-point lead in seven minutes of play. When the initial five showed signs of weakening toward the end of the second half, an entirely new five was sent into the fray and held the Hoosiers helpless.

The floor work of the Nebraskans, star basket throwing by Bekins and Gilbert and the guarding of Captain Schellenberg and Bailey featured. Over 2,000 spectators attended the game, which was preceded by a parade through Valparaiso by the entire student body of the university. The score:

the city papers where they expect to gain advancement in a comparatively short time. He said many students graduating from his department were afraid to venture into the country field because of the capital required and of the unattractiveness of the small town newspaper to the college-trained young man seeking a location. Prof. Fogg asked for the co-operation of the editors in extending and enlarging journalism courses at the university.

Dean Buck told of the practical difficulties confronting the department of journalism. He spoke of the growing need for a large university paper and of the advantages of owning such a publication. The new courses which will be offered soon will include general subjects such as political science, English, economics and philosophy. With these basic studies rounding out a journalism course, Dean Buck expressed the desire that Nebraska would interest college men in the field of journalism.
