MISS COPPOCK SPEAKS AT VESPERS TUESDAY

"Thirteen Years in China," was the subject of Miss Grace Coppock's address before a crowded Woman's Hall at the Y. W. C. A. Vespers Tuesday afternoon. Miss Coppock rather objected to the way her subject was announced; for, she said, she had been thirteen and a half years in China, and she did not want to lose that six months. She sketched the rapid growth of the Y. W. C. A. in China during those years.

The steps in organizing a new Y. W. C. A. in China are long and complex, because the Chinese women are not used to organizing. First a good deal of work must be done in working up enthusiasm in separate groups. Then a preorganization committee is formed which manages finances, publicity and the general business of getting things started. Before either of these things can be done the secretary has to be found, has to spend at least a year in learning the language, and has to study the special problems of her field. It is this preliminary work with which the two graduates of Nebraska now in R. W. C. A. at Hang-Chow, Miss Lowry and Miss Hartley, are now engaged.

Miss Coppock told many interesting experiences which she had been through, such as her trip over in a freight ship, her journeys by houseboat, her two years of language study in the interior. She brought warm greetings from the other Nebraskans in China.

THE DAILY DITTY

Ah—The curse of booze, the curse
Of wicked, wicked booze;
Tho' banned from use, its little stream
Continues still to ooze.

And strange, ah very strange it is
How many seek to soak
Their souls in imitation of
Good booze—ah, its a joke.

To that extent that certain of
The fact that they are stewed,
They long to have the whole world
know
And add to gossip's food.

Yet, ah, why steal a pink shade lamp
And cart it off in glee,
To park it on the front porch of
A gent's fraternity?

Why boldly lift an unlocked latch?
I can't conceive it right
To drum airs on an upright when
It's four bells in the night.

Shameful? Ah, it's more than that
I pause to choose a word
That will adequately describe the lay
Of scandal that I've heard.

'Tis no use, I will call a halt
But I know how I feel;
And you who love good scandal—well
What make you of the deal?

And both of them were rollers;
But the first time she tried them out
She knocked out all her molars."

PALLADIAN SOCIETY PASSES RESOLUTIONS

At a meeting of the Palladian Literary Society in Palladian Hall, Temple Building, Friday evening, the question of adopting the honor system at the university was discussed. The society decided to pass resolutions, favoring the honor system and advocating its adoption throughout the school.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas; There exists a great deal of copying and cheating during examinations in the university,

And Whereas, there are certain students who copy, borrow, or buy written work of others, handing it in as their own,

And Whereas; dishonesty and fraud are prevalent in university politics,

And Whereas, as a result of such dishonesty the school is injured as well as the character of the guilty student,

And Whereas; the University of Nebraska is among the last of large schools to adopt the honor spirit;

Be it Resolved by the Palladian Literary Society that the Honor Spirit be adopted by the society as a whole in all academic work, in personal relations with fellow students and in all school activities.

Be it Further Resolved; that the University of Nebraska should adopt the honor spirit.

men, who show their loyalty to the college and their interest and activity in their school by buying and boosting their year book.

Nebraska is known all over the United States for its successful athletic teams and this year the Cornhusker management is putting forth its best efforts to show the teams that the student body as a whole appreciate their efforts to place Nebraska in the front ranks of the athletic world. The football section will contain individual pictures of the players in their fighting togs. The Cornhusker photographer caught many of the players in action. Pictures of the Notre Dame, Minnesota, Kansas, and Syracuse games were photographed by McDonald and Hindmarsh, especially for the Cornhusker. The pictures will recall Schellenberg's run for touchdown in the Minnesota game, Hubka's great line smashes in the Kansas game, Dobson's winning the Syracuse game with his sensational drop kick, and many other interesting pictures.

The basketball and track sections will also be unusually large and complete. Byron McMahan and Jesse Patty have charge of the athletic section and the management can assure Cornhusker followers that the section will do Nebraska athletics justice.

gun some new work which will be a valuable aid to this department. She has now the beginnings of a catalog of all the publications and writings of the faculty and alumni of the U. of N. She has also started the "University of Nebraska News Letter" which contains interesting notes about the university such as Pershing's visit with us and is sent out on exchange to different colleges of the country. In the near future Miss Hunter hopes to add something to university week by asking ex-professors and alumni to make four to ten minute talks over the country describing the university and its work, to the general public.

with Colorado champs, Coach Schisler anticipated two victories for his proteges but by no means underestimated the strength of the Tigers. On the western trip the Huskers split with the Tiger flippers but the Nebraskans believe that this was due to the atmospheric conditions of the Colorado city. The extremely light air had a disastrous effect on the brand of basketball exhibited by the Cornhuskers but in Lincoln on the home floor these handicaps will not be present. Consequently two more marks are scheduled to be chalked up in the Husker victory column.
