GIRLS SHOULD SHOW POLITICAL INTEREST SAYS MISS PFEIFFER

Large Audience at Vespers Hears Talk on Subject of Timely Value.

It was most encouraging, said Miss Pfeiffer at Y. W. C. A. Vespers Tuesday afternoon at Woman's Hall, to see so many girls come out for a talk on "Why Girls Should be Interested in Politics." Some years ago, Miss Pfeiffer said, girls could not be brought to take an interest in such a topic. But the more developed is our civilization, the more recognition is given to woman, and the more her horizon widens.

Today women are reaching out beyond the home. In the old days, when the home was the center of industry, a woman found enough to occupy herself and her children within her own doors. But since the industrial revolution of the nineteenth century, the work of the world has been performed in shops and factories, and the children leave the home to enter these. Consequently the mother, if she is to bring up her children rightly, ought to know a great deal about the social and moral conditions in these places. She is equally interested in having good theaters, and wholesome places of amusement for her children take their recreation outside the home. It is the mayor and the city council who control these things, and the mother should use the ballot in order to elect the right kind of a mayor and city council.

Young women should take no less an interest in civic government, not only because they may have children to bring up presently, but because even now they ought to care about the surroundings and associations of the young men they know. For this reason, even if there were no other, they ought to use their influence for a clean city and a closed city.

Girls' Interest in Politics
 But girls should also, said Miss Pfeiffer, be interested in national politics. The child labor law, the proposal for universal military training, the League of Nations, are a few of the issues which she mentioned which affect everyone's life. The question of whether it is possible to organize the world so as to prevent war, is of the closest interest to every woman. Without such an attempt, there will certainly be another war. But even without this personal motive, American girls should be interested in the fate of women and children the world over, in the starvation in Vienna, Poland and Armenia, and the all but starvation in Belgium and Germany.

America's political system is a party system, and to accomplish anything one must join a party. Which party to join, must be decided upon the great issues for which each party stands.

The meeting was led by Mary Waters and Ruby Nelson sang a song.
