STUDENTS WILL SURVEY SIX NEBRASKA COUNTIES

Department of Conservation and Soil Survey to Co-operate with Federal Bureau.

Parties are being organized in the conservation and soil survey department of the University to co-operate with the United States bureau of soils in the survey of six counties during the coming spring, summer and fall. The six counties to be surveyed are Deuel, Garden, Madison, Howard, Johnson and Pawnee.

Mr. Frank Hayes will be the leader of this work in Madison and Howard counties, while Mr. L. A. Wolfanger will have charge in Garden and Deuel counties. Messrs. Goeke, Riddell and Paine are to be in the survey work but their leaders have not yet been chosen. This work is under the supervision of Dr. Condra of the University. The department is to employ six or eight men for survey and it hopes to secure good men from Nebraska trained in soils and survey work but it may find it necessary to take some of the people who have applied from universities from other states. Persons qualified to do this kind of work should consult with Dr. Condra.

The conservation and soil survey department has issued a bulletin on the soil resources of the state. These bulletins may be obtained from this department.

NEBRASKA ENGINEERING BUILDING BEST IN WORLD

The University of Nebraska is one of the leading institutions in the study and investigation of the application of engineering to agriculture, or in the development of farm machinery, according to eminent engineers and educators gathered at the recent dedication of the new agricultural engineering building at the State College of Agriculture. The new building with its equipment cost about $250,000, and if it were to be built now it would cost fully twice that amount. Distinguished engineers at the dedication said it was the finest building of its kind in the world and the best equipped for instructional work and investigation in the subject of power farming. The agricultural engineering department is now one of the strongest departments of the University. There were nearly 1,000 registrations in this department for the school year just closing.

is suffering with a loose tendon, but it is hoped by the Nebraska mentor that he will be able to enter these men in the Penn relays. The American Olympic Committee is watching Nebraska closely this year with the idea of giving some of our material a chance for places on the American Olympic team and the candidates will have to make a good showing at the Penn meet to impress the members of the American Committee in charge of choosing the team which is to uphold the standard of the United States at Antwerp next summer.
