BARRISTERS FEAST ON ROAST PORKERS

Lawyers-to-be Hold Parade and Enjoy Holiday at Annual Barbecue.

Tuesday was a gala day for the embryo lawyers at the University of Nebraska. It was declared a holiday for students in that college and professors were on hand to enjoy festivities with the students. The annual day of fun started off with a shouting, cheering parade at 8:30, which advanced on the campus north of the engineering laboratories and challenged the workers in the shops to attention. They appeared at the windows and showed no signs of unrest or of disapproval.

About one hundred Law students took part in the parade. An impromptu band played such familiar tunes as "They'll Be No Lawyers There," "Cheer, Cheer, the Gang's All Here," and "Scarlet and the Cream." The line of march included the streets bordering on the campus, O street to Fifteenth street, and up Q street to the Law College. Behind the band a cart drawn by two mules carried E. Bailey Morcom, attired in a wig and black robe. He stood "for justice now and forever."

A special car had been chartered from the Lincoln Traction Company, and it carried the boisterous merry-makers to Epworth Park. In a hot and snappy baseball game between the Freshmen Laws and a team composed of both Juniors and Seniors, the underclassmen trounced the over-confident older men 10-5. A real big league brand of ball was played, although a cow pasture took the place of a diamond, and pieces of broken fence served as bases. Davis and Schroeder hurled for the upperclassmen, and Koehler received. Schoepel and M. R. Smith were in the box for the Freshmen and Thomsen received.

At twelve o'clock the motley crowd found its way to a deserted cabin, where food in large quantities awaited them. After several games of "leap frog" a "bread-line" was formed and the men received their noon rations once—and once again—and some of them a third time.

Dean W. G. Hastings and Judge Grant Martin were on the toast list, and gave splendid after dinner talks to the assembled barristers.

The barbecue ended with the Freshman Law Hop in the evening at the Lincoln Hotel ball room. About ninety couples attended, and the party was a fitting climax to a real holiday.

Frank Carpenter, '21, is visiting in Omaha.

Helen Overstreet, ex-'22, of York, is visiting Ruth Copsey, '22.

Irene Wilson, ex-'20, of Omaha, will spend today on the campus and will also be here to attend Senior Sneak Day tomorrow.
