Students, the success or failure you make in life is the gauge by which Nebraska University is measured.

Some folks look upon opportunity as a mythical luck that may come to us tomorrow, while opportunity is really what we make of it today.

JUSTIFY YOUR EXISTENCE.

College organizations, the time has come to justify your existence. Every organization should have its entire force out this week to push the football sales campaign over the top.

It can readily be seen that if every organization in school would join arms in this campaign, they would present a Macedonian phalanx that would make it impossible for a single student to escape the ticket sellers. Organizations of the University of Nebraska, let's organize at once and make this campaign the greatest in the history of the school.

BE THERE TUESDAY.

Freshmen, the most important meeting of your first year will take place Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock. The men will assemble in the Chapel and the women in the Temple Theater.

Freshmen, each one of you is a committee to see that every other Freshman is present. It is also green cap day. Every neophyte must have his cap tomorrow and the Freshmen are going to see to it that every first-year man lives up to this Nebraska tradition.

The band will be there and you will be permitted to raise the roof with both of your lungs on old U-U-Uni. Freshman convocation is one of the traditions of the University—it enables the fledglings of Nebraska to get together and see just "who's who" in their class.

Captain "Bill" Day, Coach Schulte, Professor Laehring, Dean Buck and Dr. Condra—men extremely interested in your development—are to be the principle speakers. Dr. Condra, the father of Freshman initiation, has postponed his business trip to the western part of the state in order to take part in the organization of the class of 1924. Dr. Condra, more than any other man, can instill determination, loyalty and true Cornhusker spirit into the hearts of every Freshman.

ELLEN SMITH HALL.

Ellen Smith Hall is the new name given to the Woman's Building. The Board of Regents at their last meeting decided on this new title. We wonder how many students know who Ellen Smith was and why this honor was given to her.

Ellen Smith was the first Registrar of the University of Nebraska. She was also Librarian and Dean of Women and acted in these capacities from 1877 to 1902. She was known to the students as "Ma Smith" and was one of the most beloved of the faculty. At that time there were no faculty advisors and Miss Smith acted as a motherly counsellor to all students who came within her acquaintance.

It is then most appropriate that this first campus building for women should be dedicated to the memory of the first prominent woman of our University faculty.

AWGWAN—THE "BLUES CHASER."

The Awgwan staff is to be complimented on the success of its first issue of the school year. This issue has shown what the combination of industry and ability will do towards putting out a really lustrous publication. The artists have shown distinctive individuality throughout the magazine and in their cover design. The students of the University of Nebraska should be proud of the fact that a few of their fellow students can publish a "blues chaser" that is quoted in international film circles and which compares favorably with similar magazines of the larger eastern and western colleges.

FARM STUDENTS WILL RETURN TO COUNTRY

It is often said that schools tend to magnify the attractions of city life and thus draw the young people away from the farm. The answers to a questionnaire given by the School of Agriculture students at the University Farm seems to indicate the opposite trend.

Out of 226 boys who returned answers, 100 had always lived on the farm. Twenty-eight said they had no farm experience and the rest 198 had lived in the country from one to thirty years.

Eighty-three girls gave replies and it was found that seventy-three had lived in the country from one to thirty years. Forty-one of this number had been raised in the country. Only eleven were town girls with no rural experience.

It is interesting to note the reasons which drew these students to the School of Agriculture. One hundred forty-eight boys came because they could get instruction in animal husbandry, dairying, crops, soil management and veterinary work. They were also attracted by the opportunity to study gas engines, automobiles, tractors and machinery. Sixteen boys came on account of the short term (six and one-half months), and twenty-three stated they liked the School of Agriculture better than the high school.

The girls were largely influenced by the opportunity to get work in foods, clothing, home making and teacher training.

Each student was asked to state his future plans. One hundred eighty-seven boys out of 226 who replied, said they intend to become farmers, stock raisers and dairymen. Twenty-one boys will be engineers while four will enter business.

Twenty-two girls confessed that home-keeping would be their life occupation. Thirty said they would teach, two intended to become nurses and eight were undecided.

The interesting feature of the investigation is the high percentage of farm boys in the student body and the large number which will go back to the farm for a life job. The School of Agriculture, of course, is intended primarily to teach agriculture and home economics and would naturally draw most of its students from the farms of Nebraska.

"Water, Water Everywhere--" And In The Kitchen Sink!

"This is the City Water Company," said someone to the sleepy Freshman who answered the phone at a sorority house about one o'clock Sunday morning. "The water main in your block is broken and we are going to shut off the water for twenty-four hours. Better draw a lot!" So the Freshman filled the bath tubs and some pans and kettles and went back to bed. Just when everyone had settled down to sleep, the phone rang again, not in short staccato jerks but continuously until the Freshman was routed out once more. She couldn't find the light switch and fell down the stairs to the second floor, the telephone ringing madly all the time. She grasped "Hello" and received the same message as before, more insistently however. This time the chaperone advised filling more things so all the Freshmen had to go down and they filled pans, kettles, cups, glasses and wash tubs until there was enough water to last a week or more. Then they all wearily filed back upstairs and went to sleep dreaming of deeds well done.

In the morning the cook and the dishwasher came and when they opened the kitchen door, all they could see was "Water, water everywhere." Nary an empty pan was there to cook in and she wrathfully began to dump out the nearest ones into the sink, all the time wondering what those crazy girls would do next.

Just then the house manager came down and flew to stop the waste of the precious fluid. "The water is turned off for twenty-four hours and we have saved this much," she wailed. "And just look how much you have thrown away!"

"Why," said the cook, "It's on." And she triumphantly turned the faucet on and out gushed the H₂O full force.
