New Rules to Improve Football Playing

Coach Jones Looks For Cleaner Play That cleaner and better football will result from the recent changes in football rules is the opinion of Howard H. Jones, director of athletics in the University of Iowa, as expressed concerning the revisions made by the code committee at its meeting in New last winter.

One of the important changes is the doing away with the punt-out after a touchdown. Instead of bringing the oval directly into the field from the point at which it was declared dead back of the goal, the team leather out directly in front of the goal posts. This was done to make a touchdown and its subsequent goal kick offset two markers from the field. In years gone by it has been the habit of defending elevens to nail the passer by putting him out of play after he has made the pass but now he is given the same protection as that of a punter. This led to the passer's being the target of planned attacks and he with no way to protect himself, was in many cases injured by such a play. A five yard penalty will be inflicted for running into the passer and a fifteen yard penalty for roughing him.

Clipping will be handled in the same way as unnecessary roughness. This had been a bad feature of the game in that a player may be knocked down when he is unprepared for the attack which is usually made from the rear. A ten yard penalty will also be inflicted for running into players who are out of play. Fouls made out of bounds after the player has run considerable distance along the side lines shall be penalized from the place where the runner crossed the line.

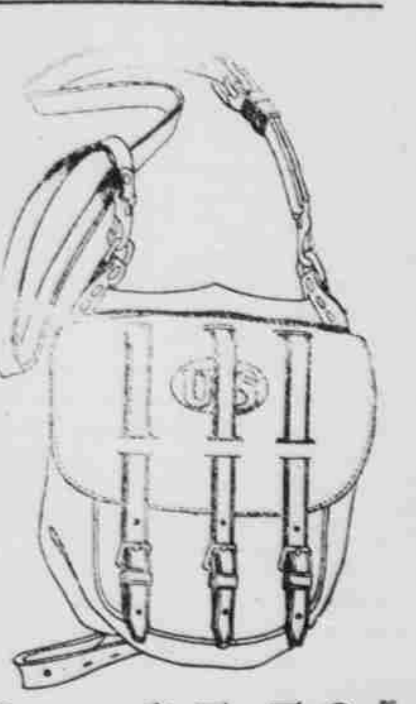

A change has also been effected on shift plays in that players making the shift are required to have both feet stationary when the oval is put into play. Unless they are in such a position they will be said to be in motion and a five yard penalty will be imposed for such action. As soon as a substitute reports to the official and the change is registered the substitution shall be ruled as completed. The wording of the rules in a few cases has been changed to make them clear but on the whole there will be no change from the spectator's standpoint.
