The man who is most to be wanted for positions of trust is the one who does not work for mere selfish gains, but for the love of the task.

HIGH ROOM RENT SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED.

Ever since Henry Ford threw a monkey wrench into the increasing high prices by reducing the price of the jitney ten to twenty per cent, Nebraska students have been eagerly waiting to have their expenses pared down to halfway meet the computation cost of the University catalogue. Still student expenses are not coming down, they have in fact more than doubled since last spring. There is no justification for this enormous increase of student expenses over last year. For example, room rent has jumped from ten to twelve dollars to an average being paid this year of twenty to twenty-five dollars. Why this increase? Building materials have declined, real estate is not advancing, and there are no coal bills to speak of until December first.

The answer is that a large amount of propaganda concerning the shortage of rooms was sent out from Lincoln this summer and therefore this fall the new students submitted to the exorbitant rates, because they feared that there was an insufficient supply of rooms in the city. This is not the case since you find rooms for rent every day in all the papers.

What is the trouble with the commission whose duties are those of investigating fair rooming prices to all students attending the University?

SCHOLARSHIP.

For the purpose of needed agitation along a line which is receiving less and less attention at the hands of the student body, we suggest that what ought to be uppermost in the mind of every student is scholarship. The student in the last analysis is the man who studies. Because we study or supposed to study, we are distinguished from the rest of mankind and called students. To this distinction no man ought to be eligible unless he puts in at least 51 per cent of his time on his books, and receives a grade which, barring accidents in examinations, is the minimum of scholastic efficiency.

This pedantic truism is dug up from a simple but persistent past because people still tell us that the main thing to do at the University is not to "grind," but that the main thing to obtain in the University is not a high grade. Some even go so far as to say that the main thing to be gained in the University is not the capacity to think.

Still everything a man wants to do in this University depends on his scholarship. You can not make an athletic team to save your life unless you are making a passing grade in your hours. Even for the privilege of pushing this pen you have to produce a statement of your scholastic standing from the Registrar. Scholarship, so far as the efficiency of the University is concerned, is still the main thing to take with you.

Remind yourselves now, that all your collateral activities depend on your record as a student. The most valuable possession of an active student is his report book. It is the foundation for all his froth; his every channel for letting off surplus steam. If you can not make a mark as result of natural wit,—and University standards are happily excluding that kind of mark—you can at least make a grade that is a product of hard work.

Duty, a sense of obligation to the society for whose work we prepare, directs our wandering eyes back to the books. The Freshmen thinks we students study. His parents think we study. The general public thinks we students study. And upon that opinion they willingly pay taxes for our support. And we might as well remember that the aid of all these necessary elements of public opinion is best gained when we, for whom this great University was founded join with the people in making it essentially the workshop of the SCHOLAR.

It is therefore incumbent upon the student body to follow Dean Engberg's recommendation and keep Monday, Tuesday, WEDNESDAY and Thursday nights sacred for study.

THE UNIVERSITY AND THE COURTS.

Nebraska has a vast amount of tennis material which is going to waste year by year because of the lack of tennis courts. The present number of courts is so small that very few students are ever able to get onto them. It is hoped that the cry which goes up from the student body and the athletic department will reach the ears of those who are so situated that they can be of assistance in getting more courts on the campus. The present attitude of athletic authorities at the University is a hopeful one. They feel that the students who like tennis should keep in trim in order that inter-collegiate matches, at least, might be held in the near future and these the present courts would probably accommodate. However, when we look to the eastern college world we see tennis courts which dot their fields far and wide. Numbers of courts are located at Princeton, Harvard, Yale, Columbia and other large institutions. Nebraska ranks high as a University and the weak spot in the lack of sufficient tennis court accommodations should be remedied at the earliest possible moment.

3,300 REGISTER AT YALE

Yale University opened its 220th year with an enrollment of 3,300 students, which is one of the largest ever recorded. This year for the first time in the history of the institution the Freshman classes of Yale College and the Sheffield Scientific School have been united under one organization.—Columbia Spectator.

"CHICK" ENTERS JOURNALISM.

Charles W. Harley, all-American halfback entered a new field Monday when he reported for the first time at the elementary class in Journalism.

If he can pass the course as well as he can pass a ball, "Chic" is booked to add journalism to his other accomplishments.—Ohio State Lantern.

The defeat of Nebraska's opponent November 20, the Michigan Aggie, by the Badgers is another one of the interesting games of October 9.

So far as the sporting world has been silent in regard to Nebraska's opponent October 23, the Coyotes, South Dakota had a good scrappy team last year, but to date nothing has trickled out from the Coyote camp in regard to the team.

WHICH CLASS ARE YOU IN?

There are in the University of Nebraska in the neighborhood of 2,000 men. Of this number there are not to exceed two percent who are taking any form of systematic, regular athletic exercise. The remainder take their exercises by proxy, sitting in the bleachers, watching the team battle for victory on the gridiron, the track, court or floor. Which class are you in—the two per cent class or the ninety-eight per cent class?

At the very least, 1,000 men at the University of Nebraska, should be engaged in athletics. If such were the case, our teams would be invincible, and every man would be securing for himself physically and mentally, qualifications that will fit him for the battles that he meets daily in business life, for the emergence decisions that must be made, and for the tenacious grip necessary to put some real live problems through.

You will be surprised to know of how little use your book knowledge will be to you when you commence to use it to earn your bread and butter, and of how much value some lesson learned in a hard fought contest will be in saving the day.

Do you know that most men who make good in some form of athletics make good in life? This is true because they have learned to use to the best advantage through their athletic training, the knowledge gained from books. They have learned to study the other fellow, meet him at his own game, and be there one jump ahead of him.

Think this over, and answer for yourself which class do you wish to represent you.

J. Lloyd McMaster,
Coach of Cross Country.

Bubbles

By Ima Guckoo.

Professor: "I hear that many of the co-eds are bobbing their hair."

Co-ed with bobbed locks: "How dis-tressing!"

Somebody came into the "Rag" office yesterday and asked the janitor if he had any thumb tacks.

"No," he replied, "but I have finger nails."

At the first appearance of Gayle Grubb's Rag-a-Jazz band this fall, a coy co-ed said to her escort: "Oh, there's Grubb."

The escort, who was evidently not a member of the MacSwiney club, answered absent-mindedly: "Where? I'm famished."

If a certain Freshman in school has the name of Helen Gries, what would it be in America?

You tell 'em stork, you kid the world.

Street cars bound for the Farm campus Saturday morning looked like the "hobble skirt" cars in New York City during the subway strike. They were decorated with students from the trolley to the steps.

"What a grand and glorious feeling," said a Freshman yesterday as he donned his Scotch tweed headgear once more and put his green cap in his trunk between moth balls. "But maybe it will come in handy next baseball season."

It is rumored that it was not the presence of Brandy in Lincoln Saturday night that made the town so "wet."

OHIO STARTS CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS FOR NEW STADIUM

Campaign for Million Dollar Edifice is Planned by School.

Ohio is in a midst of a campaign to build a stadium. Plans call for a magnificent horseshoe shaped structure costing a million dollars.

When completed it will be the largest open air theatre in the country as it will have a total seating capacity of 63,000. A movable stage is to be provided at one end of the stadium making an ideal place for plays, concerts and pageants. This section will have a seating capacity of 20,000.

The alumni throuth the country are organizing to raise the funds. Their slogan is, "Every man in on the stadium." October 15 is the day set for the homecoming at which time a barbecue of large proportions has been arranged.

Minimum subscriptions for students with optional reserve seats is $25, and for those outside the campus $1,000. It is expected $100,000 will be raised on the campus alone. — Iowa State Student.

MISS CHARLOTTE ADAMS.

Miss Charlotte Adams, director of Biblical studies in the National Training School of the Y. W. C. A. in New York City, which gives post-graduate work each year to a large number of young women who are preparing to take position of one kind or another with the Y. W. C. A., will speak at Vespers, October 19, 5 p. m. at Ellen Smith Hall.

Miss Adams has been connected with the school ever since its beginning in Chicago under Miss Elizabeth Wilson. She has just returned from a year's stay in the Orient where she visited association centers in Japan and China and helped arrange for courses in Biblical study for young women in these countries.

Winnifred Wygal, a national secretary of the Y. W. C. A., who studied with Miss Adams in New York writes:

"Miss Adams was the first woman admitted for theological study at Edinborough University. She has also studied at Hartford Theological Seminary and College, and in Scotland and Europe five or six times.

"Her Christianity rings true clear to the bottom. She has done me more good than anyone in the world unless it is my mother."

Miss Lena M. Farrar, another national secretary, who has just visited the Lincoln Y. W. C. A., says that it is worth fifty dollars to hear Miss Adams talk about her trip abroad.

There will be a special tea given for Miss Adams at Ellen Smith Hall from 3 to 5 Tuesday. Afterwards she will speak on "A True Follower of the Lord Jesus Christ."
