Liberty—"The Figurehead"—Seiznick. Featuring Eugene O'Brien, this is a play of red tape and politics, wherein the "hero" surprises us by proving himself not a pampered rich man's son but the man of the hour. Anna Nilsson, as a means of his success, plays especially well also.

Orpheum.

An extravaganza in color and rich luxurious velvets, silks and laces is the "Love Shop," featuring Eddie Vogt. Very elaborate settings and costumes and a chorus of eight good looking girls make this little miniature musical comedy very interesting and clever.

A short one-act skit—"Follow On," wherein the praises of the Salvation Army Lass is sounded, is also good. These two make up the headliners and have several contributing acts.

"Something to Think About."

Because she was afraid to do what she knew was right, she nearly ruined her life and broke the hearts of the two who loved her best. This Cecil DeMille feature at the Lyric is attracting everyone. Its all-star cast gives the picture the advantage of being superbly interpreted and not only are its character studies good but they are combined, making an enjoyable picture that is not soon forgotten for it really does give one something to think about.

Freshmen committees on entertainment and refreshments will stand as first announced.
